We'll try and keep this on time throughout the morning and early afternoon if we go that far. I'm very excited to host the second in our series of meetings, and I appreciate everyone's commitment to this issue of better addressing the scourge of domestic violence in our state. For 10 years I served as prosecuting attorney of Cass County in Western Missouri, and anyone who has served as prosecutor for any length of time, including Boone County's elected prosecutor who I see has entered the room. Dan, it's nice to see you this morning. Anyone who has served as prosecuting attorney for any length of time, even a week or just one day, knows the devastating impact that domestic violence has on individuals, children, families and even communities. Many of the cases I dealt with stay with me even today. Nearly all of them involved acute physical violence, several ended in homicide. When I was running for attorney general

It has been 30 years since Missouri set up its framework for domestic violence laws in our state. Thirty years ago then Attorney General, John Ashcroft, held a similar statewide forum to examine the problem of domestic violence. And while the General Assembly has passed numerous laws related to domestic violence since that time and many of them have been very, very good and positive changes, they have occurred piecemeal. The goal of this series of meetings is to again take a comprehensive review of the laws and practices in this area, to identify areas where the statutes and local practices fall short of protecting victims and preventing Personally I think all of us want to learn more about this issue and help highlight best practices in the court system and in law enforcement that they may be replicated across the State of Missouri.

We had a very productive set of meetings in St. Louis on September 7th. Among those ideas we have a 185-page transcript that was taken that day which will -- is either on the Internet now or will soon be on the Internet, and many of the ideas are articulated there and can be read by the citizens of the State.

15 St. Louis County Prosecuting Attorney, Bob McCulloch, for example, at that meeting said 16 17 that training officers to include -- said training officers to include specific details in 18 19 their reports of victim's statements when first responding to domestic violence calls would lead 20 to greater opportunity to admit into evidence --21 22 to admit into evidence at any court proceeding if the victim is unable or unwilling to testify. 23 24 And Judge Michael Burton called for allowing Jason Lamb to my left is the Executive Director of the Missouri Office of Prosecution Services and a former prosecutor himself in Audrain County from 2003 to 2009.

Representative Chris Kelly to my right represents the southern part of Boone County including Columbia. Chris was elected to the house -- has been elected for the house for six terms from 1982 to 1994 and most recently elected again in 2008. He has previously served as Boone County's Associate Circuit Judge.

Representative Stacey Newman to my left was elected to the house in 2009 and serves part of Richmond Heights and Clayton over in the St. Louis area. We thank her for making the drive all the way from St. Louis to show her commitment to this issue.

I'm grateful to the members of the legislature who are here today trying to help this problem across the State. You are critical to this process, and I both appreciate and look forward to your comments today and ideas on this important issue. We have two more meetings currently scheduled. The first is today's meeting and then one in Kansas City on September 27th.

If we need more time we will continue 14 this process. I'm committed to investing as much time and effort as we require. Our goal is to develop a comprehensive report with meaningful and detailed recommendations on how we can improve our state's handling of defendant abusers, their victims and the subject of domestic violence as a whole.

Again, I appreciate your being here today, and I look forward to continuing to build momentum through these meetings as we move across Missouri.

Let me introduce now the people who are

He sits on the judiciary and 7 appropriations committee. He's the vice 8 chairman of the appropriations committee, and in a short time has handled many significant issues 9 10 including strengthening tobacco enforcement laws 11 and DWI laws in our state.

And I believe that Stephen Webber and Mary Still, both state representatives from this area, will be joining us as the morning progresses.

So with that let's begin the morning and ask Colleen Coble, CEO of the Missouri Coalition Against Domestic and Sexual Violence, to start things off.

Good morning.

There is a flowchart in your binder. I'm not certain of the tab. It's funding, aptly named, that gives you sort of a color-coded diagram if you wish to refer to that as I begin.

The first state funding for domestic violence services occurred in Missouri in 1993. It was $125,000 for all of the programs that existed in the State at that time numbering about 30. The state funds have grown since that time to the current rate of 4.75 million. Those state dollars flow from the Department of Social Services and are appropriated within the Division of Family Services, or the Family Support Division now.

Just again, by way of anecdote, that first $125,000 that came into the State was actually a transfer from the horse racing commission which at the time had an annual can see there are three main federal departments that fund domestic violence services, and those are primarily shelter, hotlines, legal advocacy, case management, support groups, therapy and services for children.

5 6 The Department of Justice has the 7 largest amount that they provide to the State of 8 Missouri. In the Victims of Crime Act it's 9 about 7-1/2 million dollars in this current 10 fiscal year. Those aren't federal tax dollars. Those are crime fines that are levied against 11 12 those convicted of federal crimes. They're put 13 into a program that is allocated each year by 14 Congress. On a percentage basis those funds are then awarded to states. These funds are open to 15 16 all of those who provide services to victims of 17 crime; again, law enforcement, prosecutors, and 18 not strictly limited just to domestic violence.

budget of $125,000 even though horse racing was illegal in the State of Missouri. So having pointed that out your colleagues in the General Assembly at the time felt that it was deserving to transfer those funds to domestic violence services.

The other notable early days appropriations history is that at the time of the floods, when Governor Mel Carnahan was in office in 1993, we noticed upwards of 50 to 60-percent increases in requests for services. And as you recall, that disaster continued over 12 the span of two plus years almost. And through Governor Carnahan's leadership at the time we were able to be the first state in the nation that received funding for domestic violence services as a part of federal disaster relief aide. That is now standard in the federal government's response to states and communities where there have been natural disasters. I'm very proud of that work that happened in the

Those dollars come in now at just a little over $275,000 for the entire state. All of these Department of Justice funds are appropriated and designated for distribution through the Department of Public Safety. Sort of a flow from the federal similar department, Department of Justice, down to Missouri's Department of Public Safety.

The other grant program that is very significant in funding these services is what's know as STOP grants, and Services Training Officers and Prosecution grants that have a federal formula. Thirty-five percent of that formula goes to victim services. The others are

3 There are also discretionary grants 4 that the State is eligible to seek at the 5 federal level. Those are listed; everything 6 from visitation centers to rural grants, 7 transitional housing, which is a chronic need in 8 the State of Missouri and around the country, 9 and then civil legal assistance grants. 10 Missouri has received some or all of those grants in the past. They are often awarded for 11 about three years and then you're done. So 12 13 there's a problem of sustaining programs that 14 are started with the federal funds, and we in Missouri have nothing to go to with state funds 15 to keep them going. 16

The last grant that's in the Department 18 of Public Safety mirrors the federal Victims of Crime Act. It's called the State Services to Victims Fund statutorily established, and it assesses fines on those convicted of crimes in the State of Missouri. $7.50 a case goes into this fund. There's a funding allocation that is set in the statute. Some of it supports the 25 work of the office of Victims of Crime in DPS,

> 1 The more significant grant program is 2 our one piece in the entire funding scheme that 3 provides for prevention work, and that is the 4 Rape Prevention and Education Fund that's also 5 in the Department of Health, and that's about 6 $730,000, although that is a fund that 7 fluctuates quite a bit over each year. 8

The last federal stream is at HUD, Housing and Urban Development, and those are homeless funds. Several -- many of the domestic violence shelters in the State are eligible for those dollars as they are serving families that are made homeless as a result of violence in their own homes. Those dollars come in at about 1.8 million.

All of these grant programs are competitive. The funds have not increased over the years while the number of programs competing for these funds has tripled. We --

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: Tax credits. You know, we love to hate tax credits these days, but your shelters benefit significantly from tax credits, don't they? MS. COBLE: Yes. In about '94 was the 24 25 law that passed that established tax credits for some goes to the highway patrol, and some goes into direct funds for crime victims in the crime victims compensation program. The rest goes into the grant program, and SSBF is its shorthand. It's about 5 million dollars a year.

Moving over to what comes from the Fed. Under the US Department of Health and Human Services was the very first federal grant program, the Family Violence Prevention and 10 Services Act. That also flows like the State dollars to the Department of Social Services, and it's been pretty steady for a long time at 12 about 1.6 million. It's bumped up a little bit over time, but there's not been any significant 15 increases in those dollars for guite a long time.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention is also under that federal designation, that federal department, and their 20 funds come in the Department of Health and 21 Senior Services in Missouri. They have two 22 grant programs; one that's part of a larger block grant that can be used for sexual assault 24 services. That is just a little bit over a hundred thousand dollars for the entire state.

Page 17 domestic violence shelters. We have a statutory 2 cap at 2 million dollars, and I would submit there's quite a difference between the dollar 4 amount and the value at the community level that 5 those benevolence tax credits bring in. 6

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: Now, you don't show the tax credit money on your chart. Does the tax -- if I were to make a tax credit contribution does the money flow directly to the individual shelter in my community?

MS. COBLE: Yes, sir, it does. The Department of Social Services administers that. You have to be certified and in compliance with the statutes, and then it goes directly to that program.

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: All right. And the State government doesn't play any kind of a -- or does the State government play some role that I don't know about in the decisions about how to use that money or is that decision --

MS. COBLE: No, sir.

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: -- pretty much 22 23 left in the hands of the individual shelter?

25

MS. COBLE: Yes, it is. It is. ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: One of the numbers that came out in our last meeting that was so interesting was the notion that 25,000 people or so had requested overnight help from domestic violence shelters and 15,000 of those 25,000 were turned away because lack of resources. And the poverty numbers just came out, I don't know, over the weekend or a week ago, whenever that was, and we're seeing increased utilization from Medicaid here in the State and other things. Do you have -- with us being three-quarters through the calendar year do you have any indication as to whether -where you are on utilization of the shelter resources and increased utilization I guess is

MS. COBLE: Tremendously overcrowded and still turning people away. Programs are packed. The residential programs are seeing the increases continue. We've also done some identification of the percentages because our programs are free to those in need. We serve an over represented percentage of women and children living in poverty. So anywhere from 70

REPRESENTATIVE NEWMAN: Good morning, Colleen. Is there a way that you could just briefly summarize from the last, you know, budget rounds that we went through in the legislature in terms of how that was affected with any of these budget numbers?

MS. COBLE: Our funds were cut by 50 percent. And that 4.75 million, that was the first big budget presentation out of the house committee on the Department of Social Services, the Appropriations Sub-Committee, they cut it by 50 percent. And through incredible advocacy and contact with our legislators advocates around the State rallied and the money was put back in by Budget Chairman Icet and it stayed in. And I do have to credit Senator Schaefer for his help in that, that there were no cuts when the budget finally passed.

However, with the requirements on the Governor's office to address a shortfall even beyond what was in the State budget, the current domestic violence grants, the State general revenue dollars, were cut by 15 percent through a governor's withhold. And what that translates into is a program that was getting about $56,000 for an entire year of 24-hour a day services is now getting about 40. So we made it through that budget process with great support, again, in a bipartisan way, but when it comes down to it we had a 15-percent withhold. And I have to commend those who worked within the Department of Social Services because they really worked with us on how to do that in a way that had the

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Senator
Schaefer?

SENATOR SCHAEFER: Thanks. I do want to go back to the tax credit issue. Have you got any data that shows how the tax credits -- how they were leveraged? I mean, because usually you can leverage those dollars into additional dollars that you otherwise wouldn't get, and I'll give you an example.

Recently, for example, the food bank in town, they've received a tax credit every year since that tax credit has been available for the last 12, 15 years, and DED, just a few months ago, decided that they were no longer going to

The Governor did put together a tax credit commission that's looking at tax credits and frankly looking at eliminating tax credits right now. And so for my own benefit I would like to know how that money -- not just the amount, but how it was leveraged, and I would really implore you to provide that data to that tax commission because they're looking at all tax credits.

MS. COBLE: I do intend to speak to 18 them. I can tell you there are several program representatives and directors in the audience today. All of these federal grants, the majority of them require matching money.

SENATOR SCHAEFER: Right.

MS. COBLE: It's the kind of thing when those tax credits come in and then they've got the cash match that they can use to get all of

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: I get that, but how does that help you with your tax reporting? MS. COBLE: We are tax exempt, but we 13 14 are required to file incredible numbers of tax 15 reports.

16 REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: And you would 17 not have to do that if --

MS. COBLE: Nobody pays for us to do that. How's that? No one pays. We can't use our grant monies for administrative purposes but yet we have to compile timesheets on a 15-minute basis for all of our employees.

these federal dollars that otherwise they couldn't get. So it's an essential piece of that funding mechanism.

Some of these programs have got upwards of 25 to 30 different funding streams to keep track of, which if I could -- my one ask for this as time runs out is just to note that the federal government allows the State of Missouri to take a 15-percent administrative cut off of all of these funds. Yet a not-for-profit that employs four staff members has more requirements from the IRS, reporting requirements, than 12 government does. We fall under the same requirements of the IRS in reporting that all of

The mishaps at Enron and other corporations resulted in significant changes in tax laws and reporting for all corporations. We need to have a system in Missouri where there 20 can be a percentage allowed in these grant programs for the administration of programs that are subject to great penalties and loss of not-for-profit status if they don't do that. 23 24 And that's a big need for right now.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Chris?

of the 990 reports that have been hugely 2 expanded over the past two years.

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: I think it would be a good idea to flush that out a little more. And here's why. My colleagues in the legislature are generally loathe or at least skeptical about providing administrative money.

MS. COBLE: True.

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: But if they saw how providing the administrative money would mean less fooling around with the IRS, they don't like the IRS even more than they don't like administrative money, and they would be inclined to go for something like that, I think anyway, or at least an allowance of a percentage. Thank you.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Any other questions? Thank you very much, Colleen.

Let's see. I think now we would like 20 to welcome Dan Knight who is prosecuting attorney of Boone County to come and talk with us about prosecution challenges in domestic violence cases.

24 I'd also like to welcome Representative 25 Stephen Webber. Welcome, sir. He represents

23 24 Dan, good morning. TESTIMONY

BY MR. KNIGHT:

Good morning. Thank you everybody for letting me come speak to you today. And most importantly I'd like to thank Attorney General Koster for convening this task force which is, of course, an extremely serious issue that we're dealing with, and I hope that some of my input will be worthwhile to this panel.

Obviously, law enforcement has its hands full across the country, throughout Missouri and right here in Boone County dealing with these individuals who victimize the weak and the defenseless and the vulnerable. A lot of times we're talking about girlfriends, we're talking about wives, ex-wives, but a lot of times the thing that makes these cases just so heartbreaking is that we're talking about children who are victims in one way or another.

It's my strong belief that these offenders must be held accountable for their actions for a number of different reasons. First of all, though, to separate those

1 issue of lack of cooperation from victims. You 2 know, we need to have victims come into court 3 and testify after these things happen to them. 4 And, you know, it all stems back -- I know that vou all understand this. But this stems back to 6 the Sixth Amendment to the United States

Constitution. Defendants have a right to confront witnesses against them. Witnesses would be victims in this case. So generally speaking, generally speaking, a victim is going to have to 11 come into court and testify against the person who has committed this crime. And then the 14 mechanism to -- for -- to effectuate this right of confrontation is cross-examination. And generally speaking, defendants in these cases are going to have attorneys, and they will be able to cross-examine these victims in court. 18

Now, Bob McCulloch, the prosecutor for St. Louis, has made suggestions about police reports and improvements in police reports, I guess, and training that can be done. Sometimes excited utterances can be used, for example, in lieu of victim testimony, but the great majority individuals from the people that they abuse, at least for a period of time. Sometimes it's very important to do that, but also these people are a threat to the general public, of course. But deterrence is important so it's important for these people to be held accountable so that in the future this same offender might think twice before committing this type of offense, and then also it's important always to send a message to the community that we just will not tolerate

These cases are serious, like I said. They receive a very high priority in my office. Jason Lamb has provided a letter to Attorney General Koster. I think it was dated late July of this year. I'm sure you all have had an opportunity to look at that. I agree with those suggestions. I support those suggestions that he's made.

However, I'm going to focus my comments 21 today specifically on this issue of victim cooperation. Without any question in these cases, without any question, the largest problem prosecutors and law enforcement deal with in holding these offenders accountable is this of these cases require victims to actually come 2 into the courtroom and to testify.

So these victims need to testify.

You know, that's a common misconception also among victims that we deal with on a daily basis. They think, well, you know what? I already told the police what happened, and that should be in a police report. Why can't that police report just be used in lieu of my testimony? No confrontation there. Sixth Amendment. And so we have to explain that to them. And I -- and like I said, I think the 12 single largest reason, the single largest reason that we have this problem of lack of cooperation is due to victim manipulation without any doubt.

I believe that the laws in the State of Missouri inadequately address this issue of victim manipulation, and I'll get to that in a little bit. But first of all, I'd like to talk to you about the nuts and bolts of prosecution. And I'm sure you've probably heard this before, but I think it's worth repeating. When offenses -- when these offenses are committed it's up to law enforcement, of course, to conduct that initial investigation. And then when law enforcement believes there's enough evidence to this type of conduct.

prosecute, the case will be sent over to our office, and we will evaluate the case, investigate it as much as we can, but an important component to the investigation is actually contacting the victim in the case; finding out what the wishes of the victim are.

You know, these victims must be treated with compassion and dignity and with respect. That's very important. And their wishes must be factored into whatever we do in these cases. It's important -- and, you know, in these cases, of course, in a lot of them victims have just been traumatized. Their worlds have been turned upside down, and they don't know where to turn. So it's important for prosecutors to explain to victims where services might be available.

Luckily here in Boone County we have wonderful agencies that provide services to victims. Barb Hodges from True North, they will provide services to the best of their ability with regard to maybe shelter -- immediate needs like shelter or food, even counseling, things like that. It's important for prosecutors to steer victims in the right direction, and it's important for those agencies such as True North,

> 2 that's not afforded to a lot of defendants in a 3 lot of other states. It makes things a little

4 bit more difficult as far as prosecution is 5 concerned.

Also on felony cases in a lot of counties in Missouri there is no grand jury. So there will be a preliminary hearing. The victim must come in to testify. They're going to be subject to cross-examination right then and there; right then and there in open court. And we'll have victims that will fall by the wayside in other counties because of that. You know, this -- the experience is just too much for them, and sometimes understandably so.

You know, these offenders have a large advantage over law enforcement due to the proximity that they have to victims in these cases. They know what makes victims tick. They can push their buttons sometimes, and so they can impact certainly whether or not a victim is going to hang in there. And because these cases are so difficult massive resources are required a lot of times from law enforcement to effectively prosecute them.

which was formerly The Shelter, or the Rainbow House, those types of agencies to be adequately

It's important for prosecutors to explain to victims what they can expect from the criminal justice system. You know, our hope is that victims will hang in there, and in many cases, you know, over time victims don't for one reason or another. Of course, I think victim manipulation is our biggest issue there. But explaining to victims what can happen. Here's what can happen to a victim in these cases.

You know, typically in all domestic cases a defense attorney or a defendant is going to have a right to take a deposition in Missouri of a victim. I believe last I heard Missouri is one of only, I think, 10 states or so, it might be give or take a couple, 10 states or so that allows for defendants through their attorneys to 20 take pre-trial discovery depositions of victims. 21 And let me tell you that's no small deal because those depositions can go on and on and on. They can take hours. And after that, after those withering questions, a lot of times victims 24 decide they no longer want to assist. So that's

Let me tell you a little bit about my office, and I'm proud of this program that we have there called the Domestic Violence Enforcement Unit within our office. We have 3 prosecutors out of 14 that pretty much handle exclusively cases of this nature. I have two victim advocates, and then I also have an investigator. So I have 6 people out of 45 full-time employees who work on these types of cases.

10 11 You know, our budgets are shrinking. 12 My budget has shrunk every year since I've taken 13 over which was January 1st of 2007, but 14 fortunately we are able to secure grants and 15 about 70 percent of these six positions that we 16 have are funded really through the federal 17 government money that's coming into the 18 Department of Public Safety and being funneled 19 over to our office. So we're very grateful for 20 that. Then we are part -- this DOVE unit that 21 we have is part of a bigger team, and that is 22 there is actually a countywide Domestic Violence Enforcement unit, and this is a combination of a 23 24 number of different law enforcement agencies.

We have a couple of different detectives from the Columbia Police Department. Bob Dochler is 2 here. He's going to speak to you a little bit later. He's a wonderful detective by the way. 3 4 We have a detective from the Boone County 5 Sheriff's Department, the shelter -- True North, 6 they play a role in this. We also have a person 7 from the MEND program, and I think that Judge 8 Daniels will explain to you what they do a 9 little bit later.

24

But, you know, the thing that is so wonderful about this countywide Domestic Violence Enforcement unit that we have is that we are able to share information. We have dedicated individuals that handle these type of cases almost exclusively so we know the offenders. We know people who are victims in these cases, and we can keep track of that. We can brainstorm. We can communicate. And I 18 think a great idea has emerged that I want to talk to you a little bit later to deal with this problem that we have of victim manipulation. And I'm not going to take credit for it. It's come through the Boone County DOVE program.

We also have a domestic violence docket in Boone County, and I don't think that all

1 up. Here's what happens, and I'm sure you 2

all know this. In a large majority of these 3 cases -- the majority of the domestic violence

4 cases that we have are misdemeanors, but in a

5 large majority of these cases someone is

6 arrested and they're taken to our jail. And 7 this is going to be typical, I think, of other

8 counties in Missouri. They're taken to our jail

9 and then before the prosecution is even involved 10 in the case defendants are given an opportunity 11 to bond out.

14

15

16

17

18 19 20

23

25

In Boone County the scheduled bonds on these domestic violence cases; assault -domestic assault in the Third Degree, Class A Misdemeanor, is going to be $1,000. So the majority of these defendants will actually bond out. On our bonding papers which is a contract with the Court that the defendants must sign off on, they will -- there will be a condition to have no contact with the victim in a case. And then typically the bond will be returnable in Boone County maybe a week later.

Here's the problem that we run into. Defendant is arrested. Law enforcement says well, if he bonds out he's going to be -- the condition is going to be no contact with you.

2 And then within hours of the offense being committed the defendants may be right back at

3 4 the residence where the crime occurred, or the

5 defendant one way or another is contacting his

6 victim, and the victim is saying hold on a 7 second. I thought that this defendant was 8 ordered not to have contact with me. I'm going 9 to call the police.

10 So the victim will call the police, and 11 the police will say well, our hands are tied 12 here because there is no law that prohibits 13 this. It's basically just a contract. Now, 14 what I'll do for you is I will submit -- I'll 15 take a report, and I'll submit this report over 16 to the prosecutor, and the prosecutor can then 17 file a motion to revoke that bond. Judge Kelly 18 was an Associate Circuit Court judge, I think,

19 for seven years in Boone County. You know the 20 process here. 21 But what will happen then is the

22 prosecutor -- who knows. This might occur on a 23 Saturday. We don't have court on Saturdays and 24 Sundays. So the very quickest we'd be able to

25 get this on might be a Monday, but don't hold

1 counties at all have that. As I said, Judge 2 Daniels is the judge there. She does a wonderful job, and I -- one thing that I like so

4 much about this, and that's the domestic

5 violence docket, is that we can hold offenders

6 accountable more quickly. Cases don't seem to 7 get continued or pushed off as often. Judge

Daniels will hold the party's feet to the fire, 9 and we will have to get a case resolved one way or another pretty quickly. And that is important because victims in these cases, like I said, over time can fall by the wayside.

Here's what I see as a major 14 improvement that could be made to the criminal justice system in the State of Missouri that might dissuade defendants from engaging in this victim manipulation and would then probably, I think, certainly result in more victims staying cooperative in cases.

I think that we need to have a new law 21 making it a criminal offense to violate a predisposition, I'll call it, predisposition no-contact order. We need to have a new law that makes that an actual crime. And I'll talk about a couple of different ways that this comes

Well, the defendant very well might go back to jail, bond again, and then the whole process starts all over. I think that what would be tremendous would be a law that would actually prohibit this. And I think that we could have language in the bonding papers themselves, in the bond form, that say if you contact the victim in any way, you will be in violation of this statute which has punishment up to maybe one year in jail. I propose at least a Class A Misdemeanor for this, but that's something that we can worry about a little bit later on.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: I'd like to ask Representative Kelly his thinking on that. It sounds like what Dan is proposing is essentially a De facto, an order of protection in every case, but if it's a condition of the 25 bond and it's a crime to violate the bond, it's Page 42 1 the conditions of release virtually immediately.

> 2 MR. KNIGHT: Well, not in all counties, 3 and it's certainly not been my experience in 4 Boone County.

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: The judge won't give you the warrant?

MR. KNIGHT: We would have to file a motion -- sometimes that could potentially be the case, but generally speaking we would have 10 to file a motion to have the bond revoked.

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: Well, but it 11 12 seems also in the vast majority of these cases 13 that an order of protection is issued virtually 14 simultaneously. Lots -- I mean, I saw many --15 I'm sure they don't in every case, but I saw 16 many of them.

MR. KNIGHT: That's a tool. In some cases orders of protection will be sufficient. In some cases. But I want to go through --REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: I agree that 20 21 they're not in many cases.

MR. KNIGHT: Yeah. I want to go through later on with this panel why I think they are insufficient in a lot of cases. Okay?

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Over in the

a state order of protection by a different name.

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: I am quizzical because dozens of times what happened is exactly what you say. A guy would violate. Columbia City policeman would show up -- or a county deputy would show up at my house asking me to sign a warrant if I was the judge on call, and they'd go after him right then.

MR. KNIGHT: For what? Victim tampering? What would the crime be? REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: No. For violation of the conditions.

MR. KNIGHT: What would the crime be --REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: Or for violation of the order of protection. See very often --

MR. KNIGHT: I'm going to get to that because we don't have -- in these cases a lot of times we're not going to have orders of protection. And I also think that's an inadequate tool as far as these no-contact 20 provisions are concerned. And I'll get into 21 22 that in a little bit.

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: I'm not sure I 23 24 disagree with you on the bottom line, but it 25 seems to me that you could pursue a violation of 17th Circuit in Cass County I don't think sheriff's deputies or police officers sort of think about pulling somebody in for a violation of a judicial bond unless the prosecutor moves for it. I don't know that they see it as the same kind of independent crime as something that is -- that they derive their power from the statute.

MR. KNIGHT: You know, I'm kind of trying to figure out exactly how that would happen anyway. Because we have the offender back at the house. The police officer needs to move quickly. I propose the police officer be able to move quickly and go over there and arrest for a new crime rather than -- you know, logistically it's pretty difficult on-call; get ahold of the prosecutor then get ahold of the iudge --

19 REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: Sure. I agree. 20 MR. KNIGHT: -- and then get that order 21 done. So I think that's --

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: I agree. That's why I say I don't disagree with you on the final result here. But you agree that if you had the order of protection, him showing up at the house

I'm going to go through that in a little bit. REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: And he doesn't need any judicial sanction to enforce the violation of the order of protection because that is a new --

we're dealing about no-contact provisions, and

MR. KNIGHT: Right. That would be a new law.

13 14 REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: Right. 15 MR. KNIGHT: Sure. So then I think 16 that this information should actually be 17 contained in the bonding papers. And I believe Lisa Manson who works with Katherine Vannier, 18 19 she's done a lot of research on this. And this morning when I came in there was maybe a 50-page 20 outline of what other states do in these types 21 22 of situations and how they have criminalized this type of conduct. I haven't had a chance to 23 24 look through all that, but when I was browsing over that this morning I did see that in some

on a victim for not doing this; for not 1 2 testifying. But a lot of times the intent is 3 not overtly stated. Because, you know, as 4 you're sitting here right now you might think to 5 yourself well, that sounds like victim tampering 6 to me. You know, and we've already got a 7 statute on victim tampering. 8

Victim tampering under 575.270, Subsection 2. I'd like to read this, and I'm not reading the whole statute. I'm just reading the relevant part that we would deal with as prosecutors and judges in this situation.

"A person commits the crime of victim tampering if, with the purpose to do so, he prevents or dissuades or attempts to prevent or dissuade any person who has been a victim of any crime from assisting in the prosecution 18 thereof."

First of all, we have to show that there is this purpose to dissuade. When an offender is calling from jail and saying hi, sweetheart, I can't wait for the -- I can' wait because I've got a great idea. In a month I think that you and I should go to Los Angeles on a vacation or something like that. Well, how do states it looks like there is that actual provision in the bonding paper.

Okay. So that covers the situation where someone has -- I think covers the situation where someone has bonded out and has had contact with the victim. But, you know, a lot of times these offenders they will also be incarcerated and have contact with victims. And so what I think should happen in those circumstances is a lot of times, like I said -well, when they're in custody we're going to have a much quicker arraignment. It's going to be usually a couple three days maybe.

And then I'd like for -- in Missouri 15 for courts to be able to make an order to defendant; you are not to have contact with this 16 victim. And maybe even cite the statute, maybe even provide a copy of the statute. And if the 18 19 defendant does, then once again we're talking 20 about another criminal offense. Because a lot 21 of times we'll have these defendants, they'll be 22 in iail, and they contact -- they contact 23 victims, and it's going to be maybe some type of a threat or it could be potentially some type of 24

an idea where a defendant might confer a benefit

we prove that the purpose is to prevent or

2 dissuade that victim from assisting the

3 prosecution? It's very difficult to do. Or if 4

maybe an offender would say something like

5 honey, you know how much -- how angry I get when 6 you disobey my wishes. Well, how can we prove that the purpose is to dissuade or prevent someone from assisting?

So the victim tampering statute is not adequate. Now, problems with relying on protection unfortunately --

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: Couldn't you -instead of making a new statute could you just amend victim tampering to say to include contact in violation of a -- and that might be cleaner and shorter.

17 MR. KNIGHT: Absolutely. Yeah.

18 REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: So if you don't 19 have an intent the contact itself amounts to 20 victim --

MR. KNIGHT: Sure. Wherever you all

22 would want to put this --

23 REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: I'm just

24 thinking out loud here.

25 MR. KNIGHT: Certainly. You know, it with these orders of protection is that we put the onus on the victims to apply for these. You know, when I'm handling these types of cases and we have a victim that doesn't want to assist, I always say, you know, we can make it clear when you testify in court that this is -- you can -that the defendant can be mad at me because I'm 10 calling you to testify. I've subpoenaed you. 11 This is a court order, and all the pressure is 12 on me then, and we'll even establish that you 13 don't want to be there and testify. It takes 14 the pressure off a little bit, I think, in these 15 cases. But with orders of protection, they have 16 to be written out by victims placing all the pressure directly on them.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Dan, do you know of any state that has a mandatory cooling-off period, like a three-day mandatory

22 MR. KNIGHT: As far as what? 23 ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Well, in terms of when the police have been called to the 24

house and the offender has been taken out of the

1 ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: -- should be 2 -- should not be state initiated. I mean, if there was a STOP cap that was put in by the 4 State, and then essentially sort of the 5 responsibility would flow back to the victim to 6 say okay, I want that three-day piece of state 7 action to be extended indefinitely for -- but --8 go ahead. I'm sorry. 9

MR. KNIGHT: Okay. First of all, the burden is on the victim to apply for this, but also a huge problem in these cases when we're talking about issuance of these ex parte orders is actually getting service on the defendant. Where do you find them? It's very difficult a lot of times. Sometimes they can be found in court if they appear for arraignment. You know, we do that a lot. But, you know, some judges don't require people to appear for their arraignment. They'll just allow the defense attorney to get involved and to waive arraignment right there. So the defendant isn't available, and so service is a massive problem.

23 And then when we're talking about 24 attaining full orders in these cases, the victim 25 must appear in court. And now, you know, if we're going to -- if we're going to have a 1 contested hearing, the victim a lot of times 2 3 must testify against the defendant in order to 4 get this full order of protection. A lot of 5 times at that point the defendant is represented 6 by an attorney and here we go again. We've got 7 another opportunity to cross-examine this 8 victim. So we're putting all this burden on the 9 victim in these cases when we're dealing with ex 10 parte and full orders of protection.

Now, this -- there's this age-old issue that we have of balancing the need for accountability of an offender with balancing the wishes of a victim in a particular case. And, you know, a lot of times for whatever reason victims do not want to assist, but we in some cases are going to go forward if a victim does not want to assist, and we'll take into consideration a number of different factors; the severity of offense, the defendant's criminal history, whether or not there were children involved, whether or not the defendant has made threats to commit future acts of violence which happens a lot against this victim.

- 1 Swingle. He's a tremendous prosecutor down in
- 2 Cape Girardeau County. I would feel proud to
- 3 call him my friend. I read that book right
- 4 after it came out, and in 2007 he wrote in his
- 5 book that only four states -- only four states
- 6 in the United States still have this provision
- 7 on the books that allows a spouse who has been
- 8 abused in one of these domestic violence
- 9 situations to invoke the spousal privilege which 10 deprives us of this tool that we have as far as
- 11 using prior inconsistent statements. I would 12
- advocate for that spousal privilege to be done 13 away with. 14

You know, I really don't have anything more except if you have any questions, I'd be happy to answer them.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Colleen? MS. COBLE: Ironically one of the No.

19 1 issues from an advocacy community is to 20 maintain spousal privilege, and we talked about this at the St. Louis hearing. Primarily 21

22 because the way I described it before; the 23 entire authority and power of the State is being

24 brought to bear on this offender and yet they 25 cannot guarantee that he won't re-offend, trial without victim cooperation. And we do have one good law on the books here, it's 491.074. This allows the State to call the witness, which a victim will a lot of times recant, and then under this statute we can call a police officer typically, or maybe another witness, to testify about statements that the victim gave that would be prior inconsistent statements, and we can use those statements as

That process works. It works in some cases. I'm not saying we do it in all these cases, but it works in some cases. It doesn't work when the victim happens to be married to the defendant. Because in that situation the victim can get up on the stand and invoke the spousal privilege and then there is no testimony at all. There are no inconsistent statements to use.

I agree 100 percent with Jason Lamb's 21 No. 1 suggestion in his letter to you, Mr. Koster, and that is that the spousal privilege in the State of Missouri must be done away with. You know, there's a great book, Scoundrels to the Hoosegow, written by Morley threaten, have family members involved to threaten, friends. The system isn't able to protect women and they know it better than anybody else. So doing away with spousal privilege -- I doubt in your office because of your commitment and the work of your assistant prosecutors and staff that there would be a time when a women would be threatened with jail or put in a very dangerous situation because she's being forced to testify, but I can't guarantee that's not going to happen in communities around the State.

And spousal privilege is one of the last bits of law that actually protects women from being put in a very dangerous situation when the intent is on prosecuting the case no matter what.

MR. KNIGHT: Well, I think -- you know, I respect your opinion, of course. You know, I know you had -- over the years you've been involved in a number of these cases, but, you know, I think that once again we're talking about -- you know, these offenders know this. After a while they know, you know what, eventually the State isn't going to be able to substantive evidence.

Page 58 Page 60 do anything. I can go ahead and punch my wife. 1 MR. KNIGHT: Sure. 1 2 2 The State isn't going to be able to do anything ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: This is a 3 because she's going to get up on the stand and 3 devil's advocate question because I'm undecided 4 she's just going to go ahead and invoke. So 4 on this issue. So to play devil's advocate on 5 they can't use those prior inconsistent 5 Dan's side of the issue for a second. If you statements. And then what happens is we wind up 6 6 were on the Senate floor, you had a vote on the 7 7 Senate floor, given your rationale in favor of with the victim who's bearing -- all the 8 pressure is placed on her to invoke that 8 not changing the spousal privilege at all, if 9 9 privilege. And I don't think that that's fair, there was a serious proposal for a let's call it you know, in a lot of these circumstances, 10 a significant other privilege to extend the same 10 protections that the spousal privilege gives because we know why they're invoking a lot of 11 11 times because it has to do with victim wives to essentially significant others, would 12 12 13 manipulation. 13 vou vote to expand --You know what we have happen in these 14 14 MS. COBLE: Yes. 15 15 ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Given your cases? 16 rationale in favor of the spousal privilege --MS. COBLE: It's because they're 16 17 afraid. It's not manipulation when you know for 17 MS. COBLE: Yes. a certainty that a certain act will occur. So 18 18 ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: -- you would 19 it's --19 vote to expand spousal privilege to significant 20 MR. KNIGHT: Yeah. And that's -- we're 20 others? MS. COBLE: Because in debates on this 21 never going to be able to guarantee the safety 21 22 22 of -issue it is often cast as a privilege granted to 23 MS. COBLE: Bingo. 23 married women that unmarried women do not have. 24 MR. KNIGHT: -- anyone whether or not 24 And in those debates when the argument is being 25 25 made to do away with spousal privilege it is Page 59 Page 61 MS. KNIGHT: -- certainly for that case 8 and --9 MS. COBLE: That has to be said out 10 loud. You can never --11 MS. KNIGHT: -- and to -- and to deter future criminal conduct. You know what we have 12 13 happen in these cases a lot of times? We'll 14 have the atomic bomb get dropped on us by 15 defense attorneys. Hey you know what? At the 16 time of the assault defendant was not married to 17 victim, and then low and behold one week before 18 trial we're presented with a marriage 19 certificate. Now, if we're going to get -- if 20 we're -- if it's going to be public policy to 21 encourage people to get married under those 22 circumstances then I think that that's not really something that we want to have happen.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Can I ask

MR. KNIGHT: It's a protection for the defendant. It's a protection for the person to go abuse and --SENATOR SCHAEFER: The privilege belongs to the testifier, doesn't it? Because the spouse can't waive --MR. KNIGHT: Right, Sure, I mean, the victim certainly can get up on the stand and testify. We've had that happen. And really the best case scenario we have -- we don't have to waive anything. We're going to pursue holding the defendant accountable and we have a victim who is willing to assist, and we have that happen in a lot of cases. And that would include a spouse that wants to assist. SENATOR SCHAEFER: You know, I think it's interesting because it shows the complexity 20 of a lot of what we're dealing with here. And I recall, I think, back when I was a prosecutor in one of the MOPS conferences I went to in '96 or '97, one of the key speakers was a prosecutor from, I think, Indiana that had been brought these domestic violence cases -- you know, come

MR. KNIGHT: You're right, Senator Schaefer. I mean, the way it used to be maybe 30 or 40 years ago was if a defendant was successful in manipulating a victim and the victim came in to the prosecutor and said we -she, typically the gender is going to be a she, didn't want to assist --

SENATOR SCHAEFER: The case was gone. MR. KNIGHT: -- the case was gone. And then we did go -- I think the pendulum shifted almost completely to, okay, we're going to go with resources because I think that it's difficult, you know, a lot of times from a resource perspective to get these orders of protection.

SENATOR SCHAEFER: No. I think that's a really good idea because then, as you said, you're not ascribing motive. Because if you have a murder case and the defendant calls a witness and says oh, I just wanted to ask him how the weather was. You know, no one believes that.

MR. KNIGHT: Right.

SENATOR SCHAEFER: But the situation being as it usually is in a domestic violence case, you have to, you know, somehow disprove that it was an honorable motive which is a much harder position to be in as a prosecutor. And so I like that idea. And, you know, I don't know if Jason mentioned it before I got here, but, you know, we do have a group in place, it's been in place throughout the summer and will be throughout the fall, to look at revamping the entire criminal code in the State of Missouri. I'm on that, Senator Joey Justice (phonetic) is forward no matter what. And now where we are is, you know, this is an extremely difficult weighing process. You know, this isn't math. This isn't science. We're talking about a lot of gray areas here.

SENATOR SCHAEFER: Right. And the difficulty we have as lawmakers too is -- as you pointed out, I mean, we've got incredible resources in Boone County. You know, probably some of the best, if not the best, in the State. 11 But we have to pass laws that are applicable to all 114 counties, and so the laws that we pass have to be able to be carried out by counties 14 which are -- you know, have fewer resources, are 15 less sophisticated and simply don't have the community support, some of the other things that, you know, then make it easier to be in law enforcement or to be in the prosecutor's office on some of these domestic violence issues.

MR. KNIGHT: And I'll tell you what. I 21 think that if -- the no-contact provision is what I initially advocated for here; the big push to make it a violation to -- or to make it 24 a violation of the criminal laws to have contact against a court order. I think that would help laboring oar on that. So that's the place I 2 think to slip some of these things into what we're looking at when we come out with a 4 recommendation for what the General Assembly 5 will do.

25 on that, and Jason has been carrying the ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Colleen, and then if it's okay with the panel I'd like to take a quick 10-minute break.

MS. COBLE: Just to put this in context. In order to get the first major domestic violence law through, the changes that are the basis for what we have in place now in 1989, the only way it would pass out of the House through the judiciary committee was to put in a clause that says that good faith attempts to reconcile a marriage shall not be deemed witness tampering or victim tampering.

There is a hole that was purposely put in the law because there is still -- there was still that belief that these were family matters that shouldn't be going through the courts. Unfortunately, there is still a community in positions of authority in certain communities around the State who still hold to that belief. So again, I want to express my concerns about

But on that particular issue I think that we might just have to agree to disagree. And, you know, to tell you the truth I've put it in -- I softened up the terms because I could have quoted from Morley Swingle's book where he considered this to be an 18 embarrassment and everything else to the State of Missouri, and I didn't go that far. But I certainly think that, you know, I'm always going to advocate for the -- for that to be done away with, the spousal privilege, but I respect your

1 today and talk in a forum like this which I'm 2 not familiar with, but I realized, take the

3 selfishness aside, that this is a very important

4 and worthwhile topic. Domestic violence victims 5 do not often get the opportunity to speak on their own behalf so I'm happy to be here today.

I'm a detective with the Columbia Police Department. I've been here for ten years with the department, spent seven years as a patrol officer working the midnight beat. For the last three years I've been assigned to the Domestic Violence Enforcement unit, specifically with the major crimes unit as a detective.

During my testimony today I would like to share with you basically an overview of what the DOVE unit is. I know Mr. Knight has already touched on that. I'd like to go just a little bit further, explain what the role of a domestic violence detective is, some of the things that we do in our job and our duties. And then as time allows there's four specific areas that I would like to touch on where I think appropriate changes would make law enforcement's response to 23 24 domestic violence victims better.

25 Those four things are; 1, the ability

let's take a 10-minute break.

Dan, thank you very much for a very thorough and well thought out presentation. I appreciate your time this morning. We'll reconvene in seven or eight, ten minutes.

(Thereupon, the proceedings stood in temporary recess.)

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: I would ask if Detective Bob Dochler could come forward from the Columbia Police Department and talk with us about some of the best practices specifically related to the domestic violence enforcement unit, the DOVE unit that prosecutor, Dan Knight, was discussing earlier.

Bob, welcome. Thank you for taking -thank you for what you do, first of all, and thank you for taking time this morning to talk with us.

20 BY MR. DOCHLER:

Mr. Koster, and members of the panel, thank you as well for, one, the opportunity to be here and address you today and talk to you and, second, for holding these hearings. Quite honestly, I was scared to death to show up here to hold arrested subjects for a minimum of a

2 24-hour period. No. 2, that law enforcement officers need to have the ability to detain a

4 respondent in an ex parte who is still waiting

5 for the service of the ex parte. No. 3, I'd 6 also like to touch on and address a little

7 further the no-contact bond conditions that our

8 judges are graciously putting on the conditions

9 of their bond but they're not being adhered to 10 by suspects or defendants in our domestic

11 violence cases. And then, fourth, if I have the 12 time, would be that in our community, in our 13 state, third degree domestic assault cases with

14 physical injury are misdemeanors unless there's

15 two prior convictions which make them a felony. 16 I'd like to touch on that and see if there would be any room for increasing those to felonies.

With that said, I'd go back at kind of an explanation of what the DOVE unit is. The

19 20 DOVE unit stands for Domestic Violence

21 Enforcement unit. It's history; about 13 years 22 ago my former partner in the DOVE unit, Jeff

23 Westbrook, was instrumental in developing this

24 unit along with representatives of the Boone

25 County Sheriff's Department, probation and

The purpose for this was that local jurisdictions were handling domestic violence in different and often ways that were not consistent with each other. I think their goal was to come together -- to bring together lines of communication and to get on the same page, if you will, to work towards our goal, and that is holding offenders accountable and assisting victims of domestic violence. Along with that is the term coordinated community response. I can't say enough about that.

Currently, we have one detective from the Boone County Sheriff's Department, two detectives from the Columbia Police Department, myself and Randy Nichols. We have three investigators from Boone -- or assistant prosecutors from the Boone County Court that are assigned specifically to domestic violence, two representatives from probation and parole, two advocates from the women's shelter now called True North, two advocates from the Boone County court system and additional investigators, court liaisons, all part of this program. All right?

1 North Shelter in cooperation with the Columbia

2 Police Department is a domestic violence first Page 72

- 3 responder advocate. This is an effort to have
- 4
- an advocate available. We looked at statistics
- 5 in our call volume of when was the greatest
- 6 likelihood for someone after normal business
- 7 hours to need services, and it's a tough
- 8 position to fill. Nobody wants to work the
- 9 hours this young lady is going to work, but she
- 10 has stepped up, applied for the position, and I 11 think we've got a good person in place now.

This advocate is going to respond when 13 an officer finds certain criteria in a domestic

14 violence call. We're talking about first responder blue uniformed officers on the street 15

responding to calls saying these criteria are 16

17 here. We're going to call out this advocate.

She's going to stage in the area, and when it's 18

19 safe to do so she's going to come in, and we're

20 going to get her in contact with immediate services. I think this is groundbreaking, and I 21 22 applaud True North for going forward with this and developing this. It's huge. 23

24 Also new within the past couple of 25 years is a liaison the Court developed to hold

Page 71

We meet on a monthly basis to go over case studies, cases we're currently working on, cases we've previously worked on as well as problems that we are seeing with our unit and ways to improve. Basically, it's a forum for us to bring about these problems, offer solutions and work to do a better job in our community helping victims of domestic violence.

Another thing I'd like to give a praise on is our relation with the advocates in our community. We have two advocates working directly with detectives. I have one in our office that we see on a regular basis. She splits her time at our office as well as the sheriff's department. We share our reports with them. We work together in a response to help victims and get them the services that they need.

Recently, there's been additional 20 changes. Prosecutor Knight talked about Judge Daniels' domestic violence docket which is new 22 and not everywhere in the State of Missouri. It's a great way to streamline, and I'll let her 23 talk more about that if she chooses. Another 24 25 thing is the recent development through True

Page 73 -- help hold offenders accountable. We have

2 something called MEND classes in our community

3 which is a batterer intervention group. It's a

4 28-week course mandated by the Court for 5 offenders to attend if they fit the 6 qualifications. There had been problems in the 7 past with accountability; not attending the 8 courses as scheduled, and now there's someone to facilitate that, keep track of it and keep in 9

10 contact with the Court. I think this is also a 11 great step.

12 Yes, sir?

13

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: Do you find that 14 that -- you know, I always had trouble with the 15 anger management courses and all like that.

16 None of them ever worked worth a darn. Do you

17 find more success now?

18 MR. DOCHLER: Well, you know, I think

19 especially now with Judge Daniels and her

20 docket, and like Prosecutor Knight said holding their feet to the fire, I think it can only be 21

22 better. And I think that time is vet to tell.

Another thing that we do is educate on a local high school and college level. We've been invited into high school classes as well as University of Missouri to speak to their school 14 of social work as well as their education 15 department. Also we find it very helpful to educate people about domestic violence. Young people coming into this world, especially college kids, live in domestic situations and they're not even aware of it. So we like to 20 spread that knowledge.

Specifically as an investigator and 22 police officer we do follow-up work. We pick up 23 for law enforcement where the patrol officers 24 leave off. In many communities -- I was talking 25 to a detective from Cole County. Their deputies

-- has a first flush appeal to it, this seems 2 like as impactful as anything in keeping a witness -- keeping a victim cooperative. If a 4 detective who understands the issue pays a visit 5 within 36 hours of the police coming to the 6 home, I would imagine that is incredibly 7 impactful. 8

21 if I may expound on that? It kind of leads

22 right into my next thing; our case load. 23

Typically our case load at the Columbia 24 Police Department, we receive 80 to 100 domestic

When we have an incredibly high case load like we do now and something just -- we 11 have a homicide or something else happens in our department that we have to respond to that takes our resources, our cases don't stop. They continue to stack up which means our level of service sometimes drops until we can get caught back up. That may mean they get a letter instead of a face-to-face visit or a phone call 18 instead of a face-to-face visit.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Bob, can I ask you a couple of questions? MR. DOCHLER: Yes, sir.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: What percentage of follow-up interactions are face-to-face -- or -- yes. What percentage of Page 80

1 MR. DOCHLER: There is no standard. It depends on the victim. Obviously, we would like 2 to have her in our environment where we have our equipment handy and if things need to change, we 5 can, but if that is a hindrance or a problem we are more than welcome to go out to the -- we 7 make ourselves available, yes, sir. 8

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: I want people to hear what you're saying when you say 80 to 100. That's CPD.

MR. DOCHLER: That's Columbia Police Department alone.

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: That means another 50 to 70 in Boone County Sheriff? MR. DOCHLER: I'd say that's a good possibility.

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: And that's consistent with the docket that I had. That means minimum 130 a month actual cases where the police become involved in Boone County. That means 1500 women or cases a year in Boone County alone. And if you extrapolate that out to the State, people think of this as some kind of ancillary or small issue. This is a huge both health and safety and public policy issue, and the follow-up actions are face-to-face? And then how many of those -- break those down between visits that you pay to the home versus visits where you've asked the victim to come into the police station.

MR. DOCHLER: And not to shirk the question, because it's a good question, but it's a complicated question. I do not have the percentages of face-to-face. I can tell you --

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Just anecdotally what would you guess? More than half?

MR. DOCHLER: Less than half. ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Less than half are face-to-face?

MR. DOCHLER: Yes.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Because you 18 can't do 80 a month? There's not enough time?

MR. DOCHLER: Not enough time. The 20 ones that we -- and we strive to have 21 face-to-face contact with are especially the 22 ones that we want additional evidence.

23 ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Is standard 24 practice for the victim to come into the department or for you to go to them?

people ought to perceive the numbers involved in 2 what is actually domestic terrorism. 3

MR. DOCHLER: Yes, sir. And if I may add to that. Statistics show that the majority of people in an abusive relationship don't report. So this is just the tip of the iceberg of people that are reporting, not the vast majority that's going unreported that the domestic violence shelters are seeing or the hospitals are seeing.

REPRESENTATIVE NEWMAN: Excuse me, Detective. Is there a way that you can address real guickly what your department does in terms of incidents of firearms when you are first responding to situations in terms of what you are allowed to do in terms of removing the firearms if you feel like there's a definite threat?

MR. DOCHLER: Yeah. If there's a definite threat and firearms present or used in violation of the crime, they're collected as evidence and removed from the scene.

23 REPRESENTATIVE NEWMAN: Thank you. 24 MR. DOCHLER: I've kind of gotten away 25 from time here. I don't know how close you're going to hold me to the time constraint. I don't want to hold things up. But basically, that's an overview of the DOVE department in a nutshell.

We teach our own offices evidence-based prosecution, and that is something that we think is important to the successful prosecution of these cases. There are some -- I was asked to kind of brainstorm and think of some areas that I thought would be beneficial to us as law enforcement through a law enforcement perspective to help in this crusade against domestic violence.

No. 1, the ability to hold arrested subjects for a minimum of 24 hours. Why is this important? I'd like to explain. Quite often --Prosecutor Knight was exactly correct. 18 We arrest someone for domestic violence. Usually -- and I have seen it with my own eyes. Within two to three hours the person has been processed through our facility, processed through Boone County, posted bond and is out.

Recently, we had a situation where a suspect was arrested for domestic violence; boyfriend and girlfriend, did not live together. Page 82 1 and take a look, we're asking victims to make

> 2 life-altering changes; to make moves of

3 households, children sometimes, property, all 4

things that are of great value to them, and 5 we're asking them to do it in a timeframe of a 6 few hours in fear that he's going to come back

7 out and catch them in the process.

I think this would be a huge step in giving them the time to think about orders of protection with a clear mind, think about the services that are available to them and get connected with victim services, such as True North Shelter, and then take it a step further: if they're ready to leave an abusive relationship to give them the opportunity to get out.

Second, if I have -- am I over? ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Go ahead, Bob.

MR. DOCHLER: Currently, law enforcement officers in our state such as city police officers do not have the ability to hold someone that they come across that is a respondent of an ex parte and has not yet been served. To help clarify that let me give you an

I believe that if we were able to put something like this in place, a mandatory hold on domestic violence arrests, the benefits would be huge at multiple levels. One, there would be a definite cooling-off period. Domestic violence is full of emotions and a period like that would give people the opportunity to cool off. Second, suspects of domestic violence are guite often intoxicated or under the influence of some other kind of drug. This would be a 20 sobering up period. Third, domestic violence victims; we often -- on the street we give them several remedies. Hey, let us help you get out of this situation. We always question why are 24 they going back to the situation.

Well, you know what? If we'd step back example, a quick one.

I arrest someone for domestic assault. He bonds out within a few hours. The victim in the meantime has obtained an order of protection or an emergency order of protection but he bonded out before he could get served. I run into him at QuikTrip, and I make a simple inquiry through our joint communications, has this gentleman been served vet? No. He got out before he could be served. Unless I have another violation I cannot hold this individual until a Boone County Sheriff's deputy responds with the appropriate paperwork. If we're looking at victims' safety this is a problem.

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: And tell why that's important, though, to serve them. Nobody understands that if you can't serve them, you can't get the criminal violation.

MR. DOCHLER: If it's not served, it's 20 not in effect. Okay? That's why Prosecutor Knight mentioned the no-contact provision. I think that is huge. If we could make that -it's one of the loopholes that could be plugged. You know, orders of protection are not the best option for every victim of domestic violence.

The ones who choose not to, it's kind of nice to know that there's a mandated condition through this bond that he can't have any contact with her. And folks, sometimes they don't even wait to get out of jail before they start to contact them. We've got jail calls to prove it. They'll call wanting them to post their bond. They start in with this intimidation towards victim tampering, but, again, it is something that is very difficult for law enforcement to prove.

We all know that probable cause to arrest does not always equate to proof beyond a reasonable doubt for successful prosecution, and

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Bob, there are constitutional issues so I don't even know if what I'm about to say is a good idea, but let me throw it out there.

MR. DOCHLER: Sure.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: What if there was a -- kind of a three-part process that we went to; a 12-hour mandatory hold, a 48-hour

Page 86 are your conditions for domestic violence 1

2 arrests?

3 MR. DOCHLER: Our conditions for us to 4 make an arrest?

MS. NEWMAN: Correct.

MS. DOCHLER: I'd be happy to. No. 1, we make -- generally we're responding to a call for help; 911 call either from someone involved or a bystander worried about someone's safety. Officers arrive on the scene, and they need to make some quick assessments. One, has a crime 11 been committed. You know, in this case usually assault or some of the other violations that go along with it. We need to determine if it's a domestic violence situation, and that can -we're all familiar with the intimate partner: husband, wife, boyfriend, girlfriend, etc., but they also include anyone who's 17 years or older who may live in the same house or be blood condition of probation where there is no contact automatic, and a demand that the defendant or the subject return to the sheriff's department at the end of the 48-hour period essentially to make an affirmation that there's been no contact? But what it does is it gives you an opportunity to serve him if there's been a -some kind of order of protection -- temporary order of protection has been obtained in the interim.

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: I knew there was a reason I voted for you. That is a really, really interesting idea. It really is.

MR. DOCHLER: And, you know, sir, in 15 response I'd say any efforts towards making changes towards that I'd clap my hands and say thank you. And, you know, the best you can do is put it in place, see how it works, and if additional changes need to be made down the line, re-assess and go forward.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Do you have other -- ves, ma'am?

MS. NEWMAN: One other question. For those of us who are not in law enforcement, can you explain, just very briefly summarize, what and then once we've established that then 2 there's a little more work we need to do.

related. It all falls under the domestic partners on a follow-up basis.

violence laws. We only deal with intimate

The big thing here is is we need to determine a primary dominant physical aggressor, and that is not always the person who started the fight. There's various things that go into the determination of the primary physical aggressor. Who has inflicted the most harm. Who has the most means to. If I'm 6 foot, 5, weigh 300 pounds, and my victim is 5 foot nothing and 100, it's easy to see, and you can articulate why there would be a level of fear there or intimidation or a safety factor.

Once a primary physical aggressor is determined we can use past history, past law enforcement knowledge of situations between the two, all can go into making that determination. If we've got probable cause, we've got a dominant aggressor, we're going to make an arrest if that person is there. I applaud our police department. Our policies are more strict than state law, and they say that. If we have that equation there; probable cause, dominant aggressor, we will make an arrest. No

If the suspect is not there, it's mandated that we do certain things too. In addition to offering judicial remedies, how to get an order of protection, offering of medical assistance to the victim, we are mandated by our policy to make a good faith effort to locate that suspect within our shift immediately, put out other information; we call it stop and hold 9 information to all officers; be on the lookout for John Doe wanted for domestic assault. This 10 is his description. And then if we cannot find 11 12 him in our good faith effort we will go back to 13 the police department and submit a warrant 14 request to the prosecuting attorney's office before the end of our shift. That is how 15 16 seriously we take this.

Does that answer your question, ma'am? MS. NEWMAN: Yes, sir. Thank you. ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Any other questions for the detective? Thank you, Bob. Not only have you provided a wealth of really good information, but for all the people who are Columbia residents in the room, what they clearly have is not only a person who's making a difference in their community but a guy who very is that I probably should touch on a couple subjects before I get into the actual training part, and I want to talk about victim advocates; system victim advocates.

My colleague from Columbia is a very fortunate individual. Columbia is verv fortunate to have a DOVE unit and to have so many people available for resources. But when we talk about rural areas such as where I'm from in Cole County and others, I teach at the Missouri Sheriff's Association Academy, and I teach young men and women from across the State, but mainly Central Missouri where we don't have all those resources available to us.

14 15 What I do have in my county is a victim 16 advocate. She's system based. She's paid by 17 the State, works for our prosecutor. Without her our domestic violence cases would be nil, 18 19 none. We wouldn't get anywhere. Anywhere fast 20 anyways. Our deputies start the domestic case and they end the domestic violence case through 21 22 its end goal. If it's a felony level domestic violence case, I will pick it up and assign it 23 24 to one of my detectives or I'll take it, and we 25 do our best. But without her out there in the

MR. DOCHLER: And I thank you for all your time. Have a good day.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Next up is Detective Robert Bruchsaler and Catherine Vannier. Detective Bruchsaler is with the investigations and narcotics division of the Cole County Sheriff's Department. Welcome and thank you for coming and speaking with us today.

Catherine is the family violence 15 resource prosecutor with the Missouri Office of Prosecution Services. Catherine, if you'd like to sit with us at the witness table, and we'll just go one following the other.

TESTIMONY

20 BY MR. BRUCHSALER:

Well, thank you for having us. We appreciate it. I'm here to talk about training of law enforcement officers on the academy level and afterwards.

What I've learned so far this morning

Page 93 frontlines with us every single day our victims

2 suffer. And this is what it's all about. At 3 the end of the day it's about the victim and

4 making sure that that victim gets to the 5 resources that they need to get to and get the 6 help that they need.

I can't stress upon this committee 8 enough that there's just not enough of them out 9 there. We have one for an entire county and 10 city; Jefferson City, Missouri, and there's no way she can touch them all. It's impossible, 11

12 you know. And I've worked with her hand in hand 13 at two, three, four o'clock in the morning, 14 going 36 hours straight, and she's a trooper.

15 And everyone that's like her that's out here in

16 the State of Missouri are the same. So I --

17 it's incumbent upon the State of Missouri to try

18 to get some more of those people out there

19 working for us because law enforcement in a

20 rural community doesn't have the time to follow

21 up the next day or the next two days or three 22 days later to meet that victim face to face. We try our best. We do what we can. But at the 23

24 end of the day that's the person that does that

25 job for us. All right. Off my soapbox, and

We offer 40 hours of basic training for domestic violence at the academy level. It covers the gamut from what is domestic violence to how do we deal with domestic violence, how do we respond to the call, what's the safest thing to do, how do we help our victim, what are we required by law to do, what we're, you know, required to let our students know, what they have to do for the victim, and at the end of the day that's what it's about for me.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: To proportion that remind me of the number of hours required for a peace officer certification.

MR. BRUCHSALER: Well, it's minimum of 40 for peace officer certification. I think the statute says 30 but we do 40.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: That's 40 for domestic violence.

MR. BRUCHSALER: Correct.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: But for the entirety of the peace officer certification. To get POST certified as a deputy sheriff in the State of Missouri.

We describe why coordinated community response to domestic violence is important. We list and describe four profiles of stalkers and demonstrate through role play the proper techniques to diffuse domestic disturbance and the proper methods to handle domestic violence situations.

For me when I'm teaching I think the most critical part of this whole thing, and I can go through all these objectives with all 18 these students, is evidentiary issues. For me 20 I'm a proponent of no victim should ever be in a court of law. No need. If an officer is doing 21 their job upfront and is trained properly, they can make such a case to where the victim should never have to step foot in a court of law. And 25 that's what I teach.

severely beaten, and how do you handle that. So 1 2 I teach them compassion, the foremost -- is 3 probably the most important thing when it comes 4 to relations with the victim is compassion. 5

You know, these kids are on their fifth or sixth domestic violence call for the night, their tenth for the week, their fiftieth for the month. You tend to get a little burned out, and it's always good to show them that you need to step back and put your biases in your pocket and realize that you're there for the victim, and that's -- at the end of the day that's what we've got to accomplish is make sure the victim gets justice.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Where is the academy located physically?

17 MR. BRUCHSALER: Well, the Missouri Sheriff's Association has academies -- academies 18 19 all over the state. The one I teach at is in 20 Jefferson City, Missouri.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: And how many classes a year does the academy rotate through?

MR. BRUCHSALER: In Jefferson City we do full time and a part time every year; full-time academy and a part-time academy.

I teach them how to make the best case possible; to describe when they're writing their reports the emotional state of both parties, the demeanor of both parties, the photographic evidence, the medical evidence, the follow-up days afterwards to make sure we get those two or three-day later photographs. To bring that victim advocate to bear so that that victim has somebody -- a face to identify with and that person is going to remain cooperative. That they know they have somebody to go to 24 hours a day.

When we talk about role playing, you 14 know, I put these young men and women through some pretty heinous stuff. We bring in people that have been prior victims of domestic violence and have them talk to the students. I bring in the assistant prosecutor and have them 18 19 talk to the students about what it takes to make 20 a case. I bring in the victim advocate and talk 21 about what that person does with the students. 22 When they do these role playing exercises, they do everything from the most violent deadly force 23 situations to the most passive moments where 24

you've got a victim that just won't talk that's

Page 101 ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: How many graduates per year go through the academy in Cole County?

MR. BRUCHSALER: Total I would say we're right on the average of about 30 students a year just out of the Jefferson City office.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: And when you teach the domestic violence segment, is it a solid week for them?

MR. BRUCHSALER: Yes.

10 11 ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: And are you 12 -- you're the only domestic violence professor 13 that they have?

MR. BRUCHSALER: Currently. There are others that are just as qualified as I am to teach, but currently I handle that case -- or that --

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: And the total curriculum is 440 hours you say?

MR. BRUCHSALER: 470.

21 ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: 470. So 22 across the State is a 10 percent -- so like 40

23 hours would be 8, 9 percent of that. Is a

24 dedication of 8 to 10 percent of the academy's

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Okay. MR. BRUCHSALER: Now, follow-up training afterwards is incumbent upon that department and what they're willing to put forth. You'll find that most departments that I've seen really work hard at making sure that the domestic violence training follow-up after you graduate the academy and you've been on the road for a while and it's part of your regular 48 hours every reporting period, they cover it.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Other guestions? I want to welcome State Representative Mary Still who's joined us this morning. Thank you for coming. Thank you for your service as well.

REPRESENTATIVE STILL: Thank you. ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Colleen, go ahead.

MS. COBLE: I just want to follow up on your statement given in our earlier discussion this morning about spousal privilege and your approach to doing investigative work so that the case can be made without a victim's testimony. How widespread do you think that approach is among your colleagues?

MR. BRUCHSALER: Well, I can only speak 20 for my jurisdiction, and I preach it every day. 21 Either that's a nasty e-mail for why didn't you take more photographs to, you know, great job. Or when I teach my fellow officers domestic 24 violence I discuss these issues: You need to do 25 a better job of getting photographs of the biggest obstacle to being able -- is it training 2 or is it a combination of training, resources 3 and perhaps even leadership from within the 4 department? 5

MR. BRUCHSALER: All of those things. Every single one of them. It's training. It's lack of resources. It's -- I've got -- I'm stacked up five calls. I've got to get going. You know, I've got to get this victim somewhere where she needs to be. I've moving quick.

11 Supervisor not showing up to the call for 12 whatever reason. Maybe they're on a different

13 call. You know, depending on your manpower

14 really. But it does come down -- at the end of 15 the day it's about compassion and training. You

16 know, I've got to do my best, and that's what we

17 preach at Missouri Sheriff's Association. We

18 try to teach them to, you know, give it

19 everything they've got for that moment. And 20 you've done your job for that day. No matter 21 what happens tomorrow at least we've 22 accomplished this today.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Colleen, what 23 24 is your -- what is your reaction, Colleen, to the training question? I mean, my reaction -- I think I knew but had forgotten that there was a 1 2 40-hour requirement, but when you consider the 3 fact that 10 percent of training resources 4 approximately are dedicated, at least at the 5 standard peace officer level, because the 6 highway patrol has got a higher training 7 requirement, are dedicated to this, my sense is 8 that the training piece is pretty strong in 9 Missouri. What is your feeling?

MS. COBLE: I think as a percentage it's strong. The question is the ongoing training and for officers POST -- they've gone through the POST certified to get their commission, but what are we doing as follow-up and ongoing training. And I know that's a lot of what Catherine does.

MR. BRUCHSALER: Well, we have 18 Catherine.

MS. COBLE: No. And part of the things that were discussed at the St. Louis hearing was there's also -- there's no mechanism for evaluation. There's no mechanism in our state to be able to say this is what's going on in Cole County. We can see this by the number of convictions, by the number of arrests, by the number of -- failure to have the repeat offenses again and again with a second victim or a third.

This is what we're finding out in these counties, and be able to draw some public policy guidance from it that says that because we had this kind of training and leadership or we had these kind of resources. We don't have that structure in place to be able to know anything other than what we know now which are the bright spots which are the exception and not the rule.

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: You know, to follow up on your question with the training. You say you could train 30 people a year.

MR. BRUCHSALER: We could train a lot more but --

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: You do train 30 people a year. Being a numbers geek I was fooling around with the Boone County numbers and

1 extrapolated them for the State, and I got an

2 absolute minimum of 35,000 cases a year in

3 Missouri, and Colleen thinks it's 38 to 40,000.

4 But 35,000 cases a year. You're right now able 5 to train 30 new people a year.

MR. BRUCHSALER: Well, that's new people.

REPRESENTATIVE KELLY: Right. But that does not -- the State of Missouri could do a lot better. If we take the concept of domestic terrorism seriously, we could be allowing you to train 300 a year.

MR. BRUCHSALER: Well, sure. That's

14 not to say 300 aren't being trained a year. Again, I'm just one little satellite spot in one 15 16 little spot in the State. There are domestic 17 violence trainers all over the State in law 18 enforcement academies. I can't even begin -- I 19 think, you know, the academy can probably talk 20 best to that as far as how many classes they have, how many people are being trained on an 21 annual basis throughout the State. That goes 22 23 the same for Missouri Police Chiefs Association, 24 Springfield's academy, Kansas City's academy, several. So it's being done. I just don't know 2 to what scale. I know what I do. 3

25 St. Louis's academy, St. Charles. There's

I don't think you can legislate like racial profiling. I think what we've found out with racial profiling is that it becomes stagnate, and it's an hour every year, and it's the same hour every year over and over again. There's nothing new. So I don't think you can do that with domestic violence. I think domestic violence -- it's incumbent upon departmental entities to take that on and move forward. DOVE units are great. We'd love to have one. We've allocated space in our new facility to have a DOVE unit. We've got the ground for it to do it. We just need the grant to get it done. ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: To the State reps at the table. One of the issues that has come up with regard to racial profiling -- and it's interesting that you bring this up because there are some sort of training parallels and reporting parallels -- is this issue of agency certification. We -- police agencies, police departments, do not have a mandatory certification in the State of Missouri. If you talk to police chiefs you pretty quickly get an idea that going from where we are now to 3 mandatory certification is an awfully big step 4 to take in one step, but that there is an openness among police departments around the State to encourage an expansion of voluntary certification.

Whether it's domestic violence or racial profiling or any of the other things where public policy, you know, is increasingly getting a spotlight on it, bringing best practices across the departments around the State is -- you know, there's 750 departments out there now.

A lot of them like Columbia or Cole 15 County are probably in a situation where they're 16 17 toward the front of the best practices efforts, 18 but a lot are not. And doing more -- thinking 19 more about agency certification is a tool that on a lot of things that we care about as public 20 policymakers is a good way to spread the message 21 across that 750. I think probably it has to be 22 voluntary, but it's an idea that is brewing 23 24 pretty well, I think, right now among police 25 chiefs across the State.

that we as a society are learning when it's not 1 2 really been our personal experience. And along

3 those lines, I just wondered those of you who've

4 had experience in the courtrooms, how this is

5 with juries and if there's certain parts of the 6 State where it is more accepted and less of a 7 concern than other parts.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Dan, do you want to answer that question?

MR. KNIGHT: I wasn't listening.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: The question 11 12 is how do you feel that juries respond to this 13 issue as a group?

MR. KNIGHT: Domestic violence in general? You know, it's hard to say. I think that, you know, certainly those issues need to be explored during jury selection. It's a very important part of any case, particularly in these cases. I mean, what would be the issue there?

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Whether the implication was there or not that there's an implication that some areas of the State are more culturally, I don't know, forgiving. If that's the right word.

Go ahead, Mary.

REPRESENTATIVE STILL: Thank you. To pick up on that point. I think what we've seen in society and in my years working in the attorney general's office as well is the mindset. And there is a parallel in some ways to racial profiling. I've always said that about racial profiling; there's a parallel to domestic violence. If you're not in that

10 situation, you don't recognize it. If you came from a solid family and that didn't exist, you 11 don't know about it. And if you're not black, 12 13 you don't recognize it on the racial profiling 14 aspect of things. So it is things we have 15 learned.

I think we used to with domestic violence say well, we don't believe that really exists. And then we evolved as a society and 18 19 said, okay, it exists but not very often, and 20 then we kind of go through -- and then there's 21 sometimes an attitude I've seen in areas of well, bums marry bums. What are you going to do?

I see it as -- best practices as a way 25 to bring standards and acknowledgement of things

callused about it.

MR. KNIGHT: That could be.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: I am not --

MR. KNIGHT: That could be. I don't want to disparage any particular county at all.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: And I'm not sure that's true. I think that no matter where

9 you are in the State, I think you put 12 people 10 together and they take the problem seriously if

11 it's presented seriously. 12

REPRESENTATIVE STILL: Good. I hope you're right.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Catherine, the floor is yours.

and most traumatic cases that our frontline 21

24 they are some of the most vitally important that

25 our frontline workers encounter every day.

It is to easy to get frustrated and sad and full of despair as a frontline worker in this work. So when we get together like this and talk about it and see issues and have discussions and -- so I want to thank Mr. Attorney General and the members of the task force because literally -- and Ms. Coble as well, because this is quite literally a dream come true. So if I stutter or get a little emotional it's because my heart is in my hands because I'm so excited about this opportunity.

My job is I am the family violence resource prosecutor for the Missouri Office of Prosecution Services. I provide training and technical assistance and resources to prosecutors, law enforcement and all of our allied professionals. I was asked to talk to 18 you today about training law enforcement, and I do a heck of a lot of it. It is my pleasure. It is one of my favorite -- of course, I have many favorites to this job, but one of my favorite parts of the job because our first responders are so very important to the work that we do. They have such an enormous impact 25 on our cases and how our victims are going to

1 keep it positive and upbeat as we look at this

2 and we talk about what the best way is to Page 116

- 3 respond. This is one of my new favorite slides
- 4 because one of my parts about this job is how
- 5 many heros I get to meet across the State of
- 6 Missouri, and the wonderful things that they do.
- 7 And one of my jobs, I think, is to inspire folks
- 8 to be the best they possibly can, and to
- 9 understand that they are doing just phenomenal
- 10 work when they respond in a positive and 11 supportive fashion to victims.

12 I have a video that is fairly graphic 13 that I play from the -- that was prepared by the

14 California POST program for peace officer

standard training in California. I do use 911 15 calls, other ways of trying to bring home the 16

17 importance of presenting these cases as strongly as possible in Court. And also to understand 18

19 the importance of bringing this proof to court

20 at the level of a misdemeanor before it gets to that level of homicide. We do know that the 21

22 more we can hold abusers accountable at a

23 misdemeanor level, we are doing nothing short of 24 homicide prevention.

US Department of Justice tells us survive these situations and how our abusers are going to be held accountable.

So I have a little Powerpoint. I took it down from about 120 slides to 20 so it's just going to be real guick. I promise. This is basically a synopsis of the type -- the most common training that I do, and this is to distinguish from what Sergeant Bob was talking about. This is the continuing ed piece. This is a 4-hour class. It has been -- I have done it as long as 8 hours, and so 4 to 8 hours in many, many different jurisdictions around the State trying to reach those law enforcement agencies that maybe don't have the resources that Boone County does. Cole County is one place that I've been a whole lot. Gosh. Bob is probably a little sick of me I've been there so

MR. BRUCHSALER: They're all good. MS. VANNIER: So the -- I'm going to 21 try to tell you about this because this has worked pretty well. What we have is a series of slides and training examples. I try to use -- I try to keep it lively. I try to keep it lively,

25 try to keep it interactive and most important to much. But they're good with it, right?

between three and four women per day are killed 2 by their intimate partners. That statistic and all the studies that we do drive me nuts because 4 they don't include the children and the grandmas

5 and the peace officers and the innocent

6 bystanders along with the tragic things that 7 happen all the time. So it's very important that we bring that home.

10 one case example that I use. It's an actual 11 case. What we try to do is look at these and 12 try to figure out what we can learn from them. 13 We try to talk about how to respond to victims, 14 understand the stress reactions that victims may have in responding to these cases. We try to

We try to use case examples. This is

- 15 16 take this -- this is a power and control wheel,
- but it's one of my favorite versions of the 17
- 18 power and control wheel because we try to look
- 19 -- this is a tool in teaching about domestic
- 20 violence. We want to look at the dynamic of
- 21 domestic violence, but I also understand that
- 22 this is absolutely very useful in law
- 23 enforcement because it allows for us to --
- 24 first, there was some talk earlier about the
- 25 determination of the dominant aggressor. This is a pie chart to the determination of the dominant aggressor. It is also a way of seeking additional charges because we have to be creative and use every possible charge and every possible tool we have.

I have done -- there have been a number of places, Cole County being a very good example, where I've been asked back. So I've tried to continue that continuing ed. So I've developed additional courses. What has come out of our dominant aggressor conversation is a whole new separate class on dominant aggressor. We have now a special issues -- just next week I'll be in Kansas City doing special issues in investigating domestic violence cases; stalking and strangulation.

I think absolutely that we need to have 18 a continuing ed requirement on domestic violence. I think it's very important the -that we also avoid the trap that Sergeant Bruchsaler -- that he was talking about, the racial profiling rut that we've sort of fallen into. So we want to be careful of that, and we want to be sure that we have quality and meaningful training, but we do want to keep up 1 be able to assist us in prosecution. We do know

2 now that a number of our cases are going to

3 require that right of confrontation that the 4 victim be present in court because so many of 5 our cases are delayed reporting, and we don't 6 have excited utterances, and we don't have the immediate investigation that happened. So we talk about that and ways to look at that.

9 We look for additional ways to find 10 evidence. We talk about the importance of follow-up investigation. This is one of my 11 training examples. This is -- a good solid 12

13 investigation happened in this case. She had a 14 red mark to the eye, domestic assault third was 15 charged. She had a good advocate working with 16 her after the incident was charged who talked

17 her into getting follow-up medical treatment. I think a lot of our victims go without the needed 18

19 medical treatment after the fact. But she was 20 talked into it. She had a blown-out orbital bone so the case went from a domestic assault 21

22 third to a domestic assault first because of the 23 help of the advocate in that case. Very, very

24 meaningful help there. 25

So we talk about the different ways

We go through the statutory requirements, of course, and case law, reasons to care about cases. Of course, we know so much about the impact of children in violent homes. We go through the nuances of handling children in an investigation, how to interview, how to work and document their presence. We specifically talk about the burden of proof; that a prosecutor has a much higher burden of proof than a law enforcement officer. A law enforcement officer is also looking at probable cause, and we're going to beyond a reasonable doubt and working that as well.

that training as much as possible.

We look at the legal requirements and 16 documentation issues. Of course, just exactly like the good sergeant talked to us about we want to follow up with that with continuing ed, talk about developments in case law, 20 particularly with respect to the issue of 21 proving cases without victim's cooperation. One of our issues now that we're -- that Dan Knight 23 referred to earlier is right of confrontation. 24 And so we do everything we possibly can to build

25 that case whether or not the victim is going to that the police report is going to affect all 2 the different players in the system. We talk about -- much like the standard POST objectives 4 for the basic training, for recruit training, we talk about the charges that are available. We want to make sure and go over some new developments in the charges and offer creative fact patterns so that we can look at the ways that -- for instance, I often refer to Boone 10 County and how they do things in my training because they're doing such cool stuff. 11

I hold them out as an example elsewhere in the State where they might not know about this otherwise without this continuing ed, where they might not hear about it. So one of my jobs that I see is to bring that news, that -- to preach the word, so to speak, but anyway. Does that sound bad? No? My boss says no. Okay. Good. I am religious, and I do want to preach 20 the right word.

So -- and, of course, the importance of their work and the responding to victims supportively and getting them the resources that they need and how much of a difference it can make. So when we talk about what other -- so that's what I do.

What other training is available in terms of continuing education: of course, Bob Dochler mentioned that Boone County does get out and about in the State, and there are a number of individual programs that are doing their best to provide training on a continuing basis and doing great work. One of the things that I try to do is to network these programs so that there is some cohesion in that training so that we can put our best foot forward and get to every possible jurisdiction, because as you mentioned there are almost 800 law enforcement agencies in the State of Missouri, and we have a big giant state to cover to get that consistency.

We have national training, of course, 17 that's available. It's, of course, expensive and hard to get people to. We do our best to 18 19 try to get scholarship information to people so that we can get them out there. I have a 20 statewide annual conference that I've done. 21 We're about to sign a contract for our fifth 22 annual which will be next year in 2011 which is 24 always POST certified, and we have a number --25 an increasing number of law enforcement officers

Page 124 1 our larger communities, yes, but even in smaller

- 2 communities that are interested in studying 3 these tragedies and learning from them and
- 4 strengthening our system so that a victim never
- 5 dies in vain. And that's another
- 6 multidisciplinary effort that needs to happen
- 7 here in the State of Missouri so that we can 8 move forward beyond those tragedies.

9 We also know that training is 10 perishable. It needs to be reinforced

- constantly and continually. Those who know me 11
- 12 and hear me preach know that gentle relentless
- 13 pressure is one of my mottos. I think that we
- 14 -- when we are responding to these cases we have
- 15 to keep up the pressure. We have to have
- 16 consistent policy enforcement. Part of that
- 17 consistency is feedback, constant feedback;
- good, bad and ugly. Honest, direct and 18
- 19 respectful feedback where we work with each
- 20 other to know what's working and what's not. I - think that part of that feedback, though, is to 21
- 22 talk about what's working and the gratitude that
- 23 we have for a job well done.
- 24 So often, especially our first 25
 - responders, don't get to see the end result.

that come to that.

We -- but we do need to look at what else can help, what else we can do. The special units make such a difference. Where we have the resources they make a huge difference. But they're not everywhere, and there are places where there is no special designated person, and I think it helps to have a designated person; in a large or small jurisdiction to have somebody whose job it is to know about this stuff. To get the training, to foster that teamwork. I have seen so many instances where one motivated person in a community, large or small, can really, literally change the world and make such a huge difference.

In terms of fostering teamwork, of course, I appreciate the work very much, I can't say that enough, of this panel, but I also think that an ongoing multidisciplinary statewide 20 commission would help with the issues that we're 21 talking about here. We've also mentioned, I 22 don't think today yet, but in St. Louis, enabling legislation for fatality reviews. We 23 do not have any enabling legislation here in the 24 State of Missouri, and we have several groups in

They don't get to hear about the lives that 2 they've saved or -- they're just called out to the next case or, you know, the next time it 4 happens again in the same family, and they don't get to see the children that grow up to be

5 6 prosecutors and law enforcement officers instead

7 of victims and prisoners, and that's important.

8 I think that's important that we have a system 9 of recognition here in the State of Missouri to 10 allow -- to recognize those officers and the work that they do.

11 12 Before I finish off I have a story that

13 I like to share often in my trainings that a law 14 enforcement officer shared with me about a case

15 that he went to early in his career. It was a 16 domestic call, and it was in a remote area, and 17 he was a one-man car as most of our officers

- 18 are. He -- it was mom and dad and a
- 19 five-year-old girl on the scene. Mom and dad --
- 20 very volatile scene. He couldn't get dad calmed
- 21 down, and he decided that he was going to take
- 22 dad back to the station before he came back and
- 23 completed his investigation. And he said as he
- 24 drove off he saw momma and the little girl
- 25 holding momma's hand in the -- there was a

He 4 said, I don't know what I'm coming back to. 5 When he got back the little girl had drawn him a picture, and it was a picture of him driving her 7 dad away in the patrol car and it said, thank 8 you. And he talks about that. I've met him a 9 couple times now. It's that kind of motivation that we need to keep up in these cases, and 10 that's how we're going to get good consistent 11 12 response.

of violence. We want to look for that history 1

2 of threats. We do know that there are in other

3 states, Illinois and Ohio come to mind, mandated

4 risk assessments that happen before somebody is

5 to post bond. The -- so there are risk

6 assessment tools and locality assessment tools

7 that look at, for instance, stalking, prior 8 sexual assault, threats to kill. Those are all

9 indications of big danger in a family.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: What is your 11 recommendation in terms of continuing education, number of hours, say, for a three-year period which is how the system is set up now? I mean, from -- if you're thinking -- if you were in a legislative position what's the number that you would recommend?

MS. VANNIER: I would say at least four hours a year. I would almost like to see -- I know Boone County had a program for a while where they were training a full day every year. And, you know, you see these phenomenal investigations that come out of Boone County and you think a day every year they talk about this stuff and remind themselves of what needs to be done, and that's great.

MS. VANNIER: Absolutely. Absolutely. Good question. Yeah. We have -- it's a very nuance determination. Bob mentioned the role playing that he does in the academy. That's a perfect example because it can be very hard for law enforcement to sort out. You know, they often arrive on scene and everybody is screaming at each other, and they have to figure out what's really going on. So looking for that 10 imbalance of power and control that -- where one party is in control of the other, looking for ways to determine who's telling the truth and who's not. Looking for motivations where a 14 victim might even not be completely honest 15 because she's got her own safety and her children's safety to consider after law enforcement leaves that night.

REPRESENTATIVE STILL: Are there certain crimes or previous crimes that are 20 indicators or --

MS. VANNIER: Well, I mean, certainly the law says we have to look at the history of domestic violence in a relationship in order to determine who is the dominant aggressor. The -so absolutely we want to look for that history

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Detective, do you have an observation on that question; the number of hours per three-year period? It's a 48-hour commitment per three-year period now?

MR. BRUCHSALER: I don't know that a day is enough but a day will do. I don't think that you can do it like racial profiling

8 however. I think it has to involve people like 9

Colleen. People like Catherine have to be involved in that process as to what kind of 10 11 training. It has to be updated constantly.

Things change every day so --

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Let me ask another question that relates to the racial profiling issue that has arisen. One of the benefits of the -- one of the mandates of racial profiling which is why it is sometimes -- you know, it is a bureaucratic challenge for some 19 agencies. But what we're doing is we're

20 mandating that certain data points that we

21 ordinarily wouldn't turn over to the Highway --22 that wouldn't be accumulated by the Highway

Patrol, if the technical -- the bureau of

Are there data points specific to domestic violence that would be valuable on a statewide level to collect but we are not collecting now?

MR. BRUCHSALER: I think for me it's an evidentiary issue. What are you doing as far as collecting evidence? What are you doing to make the best case possible to bring to court to get a conviction? So anything conviction related would be ideal.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: And I'm not talking about data points that -- in terms of making a specific case, but in terms of looking at the issue and understanding the issue as a statewide phenomena.

Are there data points, Catherine, in your mind that -- looking at it from a statewide perspective that should be considered by the Highway Patrol?

MS. VANNIER: Absolutely. I think that right now it's -- from my understanding of how the data is collected, that there's a lot of

> ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: If you have -- in the coming days if you have more time to think about that question and respond to it maybe with a supplemental memo to Joan, that would be great.

violence that face the court clerks.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: 12:45 reconvene. Okay. Thank you. We look forward to starting up at 12:45.

(Thereupon, the proceeding was held in temporary recess.)

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: People will begin filtering back, but we'll dive in here to stay on schedule so that we can finish up by three o'clock. The next presentation is from Greg Linhares who I've known for quite some time from the State Court Administrator's Office to talk about responsibilities related to domestic reminds me that there are two things that I want subjectivity to the way the data is collected. So that the answer when you look at any given case is it depends on whether that's going to be reported. I think that we need to broaden our definition of how we track homicides; domestic violence related homicides. Absolutely.

I think it's significant that even in our court system right now we don't have a way to track the number of criminal cases filed every year that are domestic violence related. We have in our prosecutor case management system a way to mark our cases as domestic violence related, but we don't have that in our court system right now.

So guite literally I've worked with 16 OSCA's technical people in the past to look at the number of domestic assault third charges filed each year, but that doesn't give us an 18 19 indication of the number of cases filed. I 20 think that if we could have more -- less 21 subjectivity in the reporting and more 22 objectivity, more clear standards, concise definitions on what counts as defense domestic 23 24 violence, that is, again, well-trained on, that 25 we could do a great job. Absolutely.

Page 133 With Betsy's return to the room it just to say for the record before we get going. One 4 is that the minimum statewide training for peace 5 officers in Missouri now is 640 hours. It is 6 not the 440 that is used to be. It's been upped 7 to 640. And the recognition of the point that 8 if we are thinking seriously about increasing continuing education requirements for police 9 10 officers that we should give equal consideration for continuing education for judges and 11 12 prosecutors as well who are an equal part of 13 this system. I think there is a tendency, I 14 think, sometimes in Jefferson City to place new 15 continuing education restrictions on law 16 enforcement personnel and forget that there are two other legs of that effort; prosecutors and 17 18 judges that are equally as important. 19

echo the importance of training from the perspective of the courts as well. That's a critical piece that we are going to continue to have to engage in different ways and try to find creative ways to train, new ways to train, and train in an ongoing fashion as Colleen was pointing out earlier.

I think we do a decent job at least of informing people of the requirements of their job with regard to domestic violence, but as clerks become used to dealing with their jobs on a daily basis and you see an increasing number of domestic violence filings every year, we need to help clerks understand and differentiate between types of tasks that are involved with different types of domestic violence, be it stalking or traditional, if you will, domestic violence, and how to handle those different types of cases and differentiate the ways in which they ought to be treated.

I think the clerks intend to speak about that directly as well. Perhaps in Kansas City. I know they had an interest in doing that, and I would encourage the panel to have an opportunity to speak directly with a member of somewhere like 11 or 12-percent increase. 2 Child orders of protection went from 8,171 to 3 9,913. So that's about a 20-percent increase.

4 We do not see the same increase on the criminal side in terms of the violations of orders of protection charges. We had 2,433 in fiscal 2007, and in fiscal 2009 we have 2,079. But those are statistics strictly related to 9 those felonies and misdemeanors associated with 10 violations of orders of protection. So there's a whole series of cases that's not included 11 12 there when you're talking about domestic assault 13 and what have you. So there is some need, I 14 think, for clarification when clerks are 15 entering data. And that's maybe something that 16 could be addressed via statute or -- somewhat statute. In terms of federal reporting to NICS, the federal government would like you to report any instance where there is a domestic piece or involvement, but if there's not a necessity in the case as charged by the prosecutor to prove up a domestic relationship of any kind, that may not appear on the record. So there's a data gap through training but I think also through that association at the next meeting. I think that's happening. I think that would be educational. I think they would do probably a better job explaining that then I would.

I will talk somewhat about the responsibilities of court clerks but also about just the responsibilities of the administration in general and perhaps provide some data that has been talked about in the morning session and clarify some of those points.

In calendar years 2007 to 2010 I can tell you that we are seeing definitely a notable increase in violence. And that's going on nationwide. And I think it is probably somewhat related, if you look at data in past recessions and increases in filings in those periods of time, to the recession.

We noticed that in FY 2007 we had 38,897 adult protection ex parte orders filed. That would be ex parte in full. Well, those ex 20 21 parte would then be recognized as full at the 22 end. So that's total filings just for clarification. then by FY 2010, which is the 23 year that just completed in July, we had 43,921 24 adult protection orders. So you'll see that's there between what actually happened and what's 2 on the record as having happened in terms of NICS reporting. And I think somewhere in this 4 process we would need to address that issue in 5 some form. I don't have an answer for you, but 6 I do have a question there that needs to be 7 addressed at some point.

I also just want to thank you generally for convening this. This is a critical issue, something that I've been educated a lot through -- by Ms. Coble herself and just through my experiences in dealing with omnibus bills with her over the years which is always fun, particularly the second week in May. But it is also something that's being recognized by the National Center for State Courts. They are convening a domestic violence summit in December

- 17 18 with all the court administrators throughout the
- 19 country from a grant from the Department of
- 20 Justice where they're asking to assemble teams
- 21 of court administrators, Department of Public
- 22 Safety representatives as a lead funding agency,
- 23 and also judges that are on the ground. And I

You may be aware that the STOP grants 10 that Colleen referred to do have a 5-percent set-aside for court projects related to STOP grant activities. That would be something we could use for training. In the past we haven't always received that, but I think Public Safety is willing to work with us to do that, but we just kind of need a comprehensive plan. I think it's important that we -- and Colleen has described for you that she's achieved these 18 funding sources kind of like you would -- like a stream of water would achieve; if there's an obstacle, you go this direction and then you come back, whichever way gets you down the stream, which is what she's had to do over the vears as an advocate.

I think having an opportunity like this things that relate to the judicial process that are going to be relevant for them to use. So that's one of our efforts currently right now.

Why is training so important? Well, I think Ms. Vannier was talking about that; you want to keep everything as evidence based as possible. And how to deal with those dual filing cases particularly is an issue the clerks would speak to you about, and I expect will talk to you more about in Kansas City. That refers to the cases of the races to the courthouse and how do judges handle that issue. What processes and procedures are in place for judges to identify true victims and be able to identify that and manage their cases properly and just encourage parties to do that the right way.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: That is where two parties are asking for --

MR. LINHARES: Yes. You'll see that in the civil marina much more. And you notice by my statistics we're talking about the increased violence in the civil area; ex parte orders. The person who got there first may not necessarily be the victim, and so that's an 24 25 ongoing issue that clerks continually deal with.

And sometimes that's referred to as frivolous

to convene groups can give us a more comprehensive look at how to fund so that we're not crossing paths and maximizing our fundings as greatly as we possibly can. So I would encourage you to look at that as well; to continue the efforts of this in an ongoing fashion.

One of the funding sources that we have is Domestic Relations Resolution Fund which is a $1 surcharge in certain counties on domestic violence -- on cases that is then funneled to domestic casework. And one of the things that we're looking at -- we've done training, but in 14 the courts we haven't necessarily sustained that 15 training or memorialized that training. So we 16 are creating a bench book for domestic violence that is going to be published hopefully sometime early next year. Hopefully by having that bench book and continually updating that that will be 20 an on-line resource that every clerk in the State could have at their fingertips, that every judge in the State could have at their fingertips.

Clerks have procedures in their handbooks but sometimes judges don't have the

2 filings but also it does take -- statistics have shown, the things that I've read, and Colleen 4 can correct me if I'm wrong, it takes on average 5 about eight ex parte filings before you get a 6 full order even in cases where abuse is 7 substantiated. So even if there's a case of 8 substantiated abuse it may take eight times for 9 that substantiated abuse, the party that really 10 was a victim, to actually get a full order, to 11 be willing to go through that process.

So clerks have to be continually trained and reminded of that because they're going to see this same person filing six, seven, eight times in a row. They may not believe that when they've seen them six, seven or eight times. Oh, that person is filing again. But there actually is a victim there. So I would just ask for you to continue to include clerks 20 in that process and giving them greater tools to differentiate between those types of cases; between the stalking and the true domestic violence. Again, I don't have an answer but I know there's a question there. It's certainly one that the clerks have brought to me very

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: I don't understand. I -- if there's training to differentiate that is given to the clerks, the clerk's position is not decision making. I mean, they've got to move in one direction and that's to keep the --

MR. LINHARES: That's right. ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: -- filings moving to the judge as quickly as possible.

MR. LINHARES: I suppose it's probably training that would be more for the judges. You're correct. Yeah. You're definitely right about that.

MS. COBLE: With the distinction being that the stalking component of the order isn't necessarily dependent upon family or household relationship. So very often the clerks are faced with situations outside the realm of the training for the standard order of protection.

MR. LINHARES: That's probably more of a law enforcement or judge training. Law enforcement are often tasked with the responsibility of assisting people on which way

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Okay. I didn't -- it didn't dawn on me that there -- it depended -- it indicates who has got to pack their bags.

MR. LINHARES: Sure. And it may help with separation action in a different case. So there's lots of implications.

Again, those are tough issues. I don't know that I've got answers, but I know that that -- with the increased violence we're seeing and less clerks to work on those filings that there is a pressure point there that's occurring. That's definitely true.

I would also want to speak a little bit about the importance of data, and now we have a statewide case management system which has been on-line in every county in the State since 2008. It's called GIS, but most of the public would know it as CaseNet because that's the public interface that people see the data through. But

24 we've just now completed an interface from GIS 25 to MULES where both full and ex parte orders are to file; stalking or domestic violence, and the judge is going to have to be dealing with that. So clerks are in the middle on that.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Colleen, if an abuser and a victim both go and seek orders of protection against one another, let's say the abuser gets there first. Aside from the just, you know, inherent unfairness of that, are there legal problems that that creates after the orders are signed?

MS. COBLE: It can be difficult for law enforcement to know how to enforce the orders, and if judges' dockets don't allow them to bring those cases up together it again becomes a timing issue; who got the order first. It's a process problem when you've got the two of them going on. What if his was signed and then the judge went into trial and isn't going to be available to sign the ex parte of the second petition? Then you've got -- there's a distinct advantage in time, and one person has already been told to leave the home.

MR. LINHARES: Yes. It creates 24 advantages for future --

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: So it depends

Page 145 transmitted to MULES. And so continuing to

2 update that as MULES would update their system 3 or as we would update our system where we would

4 want to work with, for example, the prosecutors

5 in their interfaces to continue to focus on

6 that. Data interfaces are not direct services

7 and they don't -- they're not -- in many ways

they don't feel as important as the work that vour caseworkers are doing because vou're not 9

10 dealing with a victim directly, but without that information nobody can apply for the grants and 11

12 get the money to do the things they need to do.

13 So there is a need there for that, and my office

14 is certainly involved in making sure that those 15 efforts go forward.

Another issue I want to bring up that I'm not sure -- it may have been brought up in

18 St. Louis, but I don't know if I've heard it

19 today. It's the whole issue of the Lautenberg 20

Amendment and the differentiation between 21 Missouri statutes vis-a-vis Lautenberg and most 22 states. I think Missouri -- and Colleen will

23 know this off the top of her head. How many

25 MS. COBLE: Missouri, South Carolina

MR. LINHARES: There's a federal domestic violence gun law that prohibits -- I checked into this this morning -- purchase or transfer, which is the only things that the federal government can involve itself in. They can't necessarily deal with possession directly. That's a state law enforcement issue. But purchase or transfer of a weapon to anyone who has been convicted of a misdemeanor crime of domestic violence is prohibited under federal law but is allowed under Missouri state law.

14 There's three states that still have 15 that on the books, and Missouri is one of them. 16 Obviously, that's a hot political issue, and 17 that's probably why it hasn't happened in Missouri. But the implication, as far as the 18 19 efforts that we're talking about and data sharing and all these kinds of things, and 20 grants, is that if the Feds were to come in 21 through the Department of Justice and 22 investigate Missouri's compliance with the 23 24 Lautenberg Amendment, there could be a potentiality that federal funds would be at 1 told not to tell people how to file. And that's 2 -- that's -- they're doing their job, but it's 3 not good -- necessarily doesn't seem like good 4 customer service for public service, but then 5 again, they're attorneys and that's the 6 attorney's job to assist people with how to 7 file.

8 The clerk is not in the position of an 9 advocate. They're in the position of 10 administering the case. So a lot of times people will come to court in that position, and 11 obviously that's got to be a challenge for the 12 13 victim. You know, the victim is there and 14 they're scared. They don't know what to do. 15 Then they get there and the clerk can't help 16 them. So there's a justice gap issue there at 17 the courthouse as well. Some counties have 18 resources to address that. I know that St. 19 Louis County has an ombudsman-type position, and 20 Boone County may have something similar. I don't know. But there are very few counties 21 that have the capability to address that issue 22 effectively. That's another thing that I've 23 24 noticed since doing this. 25 ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Greg, I'm not risk. And that would be the tipping point where Missouri would have to as a state address whether or not they -- and I don't know how you would handle this, again, but as an administrator these are issues that I see.

Dealing with the issue of preserving the funding for these areas or dealing with the issue of restricting gun rights as it may be perceived by many which is why it hasn't been done at this point. So that's a pressure point that's out there and something that I would encourage this group to address as well. And that interacts through MULES and through our system to the NICS database and all that. It goes along with that.

I would agree with a lot of what Dan Knight was saying this morning about any efforts we can engage in to provide less burden on the victim, more support in courthouses for 20 assisting victims with knowing how to file. And 21 that's done a lot I know at the shelter level, 22 but some people who wouldn't go to a shelter may go straight to the courthouse. And clerks --23 this is another challenge for clerks because 24

25 they don't -- they're not attorneys, and they're

Page 149 as familiar as I should be on the clerk issue with regard to providing assistance to those who want to file.

MR. LINHARES: Yes.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Will you flush that out? Is that -- that's not a statute, is it? I mean, is that an internal policy, and how aggressively is that policy pursued? Is it local policy or is it state policy?

MR. LINHARES: It's more of an issue that has been raised in the past by attorneys. Maybe if you're an attorney for a respondent you may raise the issue that that clerk assisted the victim with the filing and that may cause the case to be compromised.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: So is the recommend -- is it a recommendation from state court administrators to the clerks or how is that policy --

21 MR. LINHARES: How has that been put 22 out?

23 ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Is it policy 24 and how is it transmitted, if it is?

25 MR. LINHARES: As with many things it

14

15

Page 150 -- all law is local in a lot of ways. I wouldn't know that even if there was an OSCA 3 policy on it that that would be the gospel. I 4 think really this is an issue that is driven by 5 presiding judges throughout the State and driven 6 by a local practice. But traditionally the 7 clerks being clerks and the judges being 8 attorneys, the clerk will defer if there's an 9 issue of how far they can go in assisting a client. They will bring that to a judge and say 10 this person wants me to tell them should I file 11 this as a stalking or should I file this as a --12 13 ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Oh. I see. 14 So it's more then a matter of how to fill out a 15 16

MR. LINHARES: Oh, yeah. They want you -- they will -- I mean, somebody that comes in, they'll try to get as much help as they can as you would expect. And so -- domestic violence training, per se. There --1 2 there pretty much is in practice, though.

3 MR. LAMB: OSCA provides it. I 4 understand that.

5 MR. LINHARES: We do that. And we 6 continue to look for ways to make that lively. 7 And Colleen has been a trainer for us many 8 times.

MS. COBLE: It started in 1990 with the first official start of what they continue to incorporate as their yearly ongoing --MR. LAMB: Head of the judicial 12 13 college.

MR. LINHARES: This would be clerk college. Well, judicial college in the family law section. Family law judges will stay an extra day at judicial college. There's a specific section that I give to family law that 19 day. And a lot of this is -- that type of 20 training is done there. There's also something done at your initial judicial training when you 21

22 come as a new judge. New judge orientation will have a piece in there about this, because 23

24 typically new judges are going to get this line

25 of work as you can imagine.

MS. COBLE: And then if I could, in the training with clerks it's -- we recommend that they realize that we're not asking them from the advocacy community to be advocates, but given the fact that half of Missouri counties don't have a program within their borders, there are clerks in these jurisdictions who aren't going to be able to follow the best practice of picking up the phone and having the advocate come to the courthouse to help. MR. LINHARES: That's the best way to 12 handle it.

MR. COBLE: That is the most effective 14 way to do it, but in so many places the clerks are the -- they're the frontline staff.

MR. LINHARES: They really are. They're our frontline. There's no doubt.

MR. LAMB: Greg, certainly circuit clerks are elected officials.

MR. LINHARES: Yes.

MR. LAMB: Is there any type of 22 mandatory domestic violence related training for circuit clerks as has been discussed on POST 24 certification?

MR. LINHARES: There's no mandatory

1 I've experienced that when I was in the 2 military as well. I was a legal assistance attorney, and the new guy always got legal 4 assistance. The cool guys got to go to criminal 5 law. No offense Attorney General. But they 6 want the cool guys -- everybody wants to do the 7 criminal stuff. And attorneys love it, you 8 know, but so -- and I understand, but this stuff 9 is done typically by your newer associate 10 circuit judge. So there's even a more enhanced 11 need for training. 12

REPRESENTATIVE STILL: I have a question.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Go ahead. We're pretty -- we're not running like a 16 committee hearing so you don't have to -- you just jump in.

REPRESENTATIVE STILL: You don't have to ask permission?

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Exactly. REPRESENTATIVE STILL: And it's a good thing because they'd never give me permission.

Or that we do federally but not for state? 3 talked about there's some clarification when 4 MR. LINHARES: The State statute 4 clerks are entering data. I guess I understood 5 doesn't authorize your weapons to be taken in 5 that to mean well, they have to report certain those circumstances in Missouri. Misdemeanor 6 6 things to the Feds. 7 7 crime of domestic violence will not authorize MR. LINHARES: Well, yes. That's in 8 vou -- doesn't -- Missouri law does not 8 regard -- that is in regard to the fact that the 9 9 authorize that weapon to be taken in that fact pattern -- the Feds want you to be as 10 circumstance whereas at the federal level it 10 comprehensive with data as possible and understandably. But depending on how a case may 11 does. 11 be charged or what is entered into the record, 12 REPRESENTATIVE STILL: Now, is that 12 13 what you were talking about or is there 13 it may not be certain whether or not the issue 14 something different called the Lautenberg 14 was a domestic one or not that would qualify as 15 something that should be reported to the Feds. 15 Amendment? 16 16 If it's an assault, let's -- for MR. LINHARES: That is the Lautenberg 17 Amendment. The Lautenberg Amendment is that 17 example, and, you know, there's people here misdemeanor crimes of domestic violence will better apt to talk about this than I am, but if 18 18 19 disqualify you from purchase or transfer of a 19 it's charged as an assault but you don't have to 20 prove up the domestic relationship then that may 20 weapon. REPRESENTATIVE STILL: Okay. And it not be in the record. But if, in fact, it was 21 21 22 domestic but it doesn't --22 would require a change of statute in Missouri? 23 MR. LINHARES: Yes. In Missouri. 23 MR. LAMB: Or a domestic that maybe was 24 REPRESENTATIVE STILL: That ain't going 24 pled to a peace disturbance or an assault third. 25 25 REPRESENTATIVE STILL: But it seems to to happen.

me like if you're having to report it anyway to 2 the Feds -- am I missing something here?

> MR. LINHARES: Well, we only report what the disposition is. So maybe the fact pattern says yes but disposition doesn't show it. So we're not -- so in other words, the data that the Feds would then get and that we would use to apply for grants and what have you, or for a case reporting statistics, would not show enough domestic cases when, in fact, there's more than we're actually showing. REPRESENTATIVE STILL: Thank you. MR. LINHARES: I just wanted to briefly touch on a couple other issues that the clerks have raised as well. This one was brought up earlier regarding bad addresses for respondents and how to find people. Again, Jason and I are working on a project for criminal and justice information sharing, and I think this keeps cropping up everywhere I look. Having a comprehensive plan throughout the State as to who's got the right data and who this individual is; uniform state identification, if you will, 23 24 in some shape -- way, shape or form is going to 25 need to be done.

it wouldn't happen until the Feds investigate us and then people have to decide do we want to do the bill or the money. REPRESENTATIVE STILL: I hope you're right. I mean, I certainly would be supportive of that. MR. LINHARES: I think it would only happen if people were able to say my hands are tied. They're coming for us, and we're going to lose a bunch of money if we don't do it.

MR. LINHARES: No. That's why I said

14 MR. LINHARES: Billions.

Multi-millions. No, not billions. I'm sorry.

16 Multi-millions certainly.

to Mr. Lamb from the Feds, or the Attorney 23

General's office, all of those funds would be at 24 25 risk.

Fax: 314.644.1334

Otherwise, you know, when you've got that respondent and you can't serve that respondent, that becomes an issue. And so we need to make sure we have the right address for those respondents when cases are coming to the courts because that's a frustration for the clerks. It keeps filing -- keeps coming back and the clerk keeps having to deal with it. That's an issue.

I discussed the issue -- most of the other issues I think I've already talked about. The other issue that I would bring up is privacy; the ongoing needs for privacy. Last year we passed a piece of legislation to keep some more of the personal information in the confidential case sheet and not in the public record regarding personal information; bank information, Social Security numbers and information in that form.

I don't know if there's any other places like that that we haven't found yet, but if there are we need to continue to keep the focus on privacy, particularly in regard to the victim and where the victim is, and continue to 25 train and make sure that our laws are in place that keep the identification of the victim and where that victim is located secret if it needs know, probation officers, increase probation officer funding for keeping track of domestic violence offenders. That's critical. All of questions as we've been going along. Does

MS. COBLE: Just to -- I know that there have been some changes that the court

those things will help judges and clerks do their job too. So it's a comprehensive effort.

I'd be happy to answer any other continue not just funding court efforts but, you to be. And also we want to encourage to

1 quickly trying to search my memory to remember

2 what it is. It had -- it's a very backwards 3 seeming kind of thing. I'm trying to remember

4 it. I'm sure as soon as I sit down I'll

5 remember exactly what it is. But in order to 6 qualify for federal funding for data sharing to

7 NICS, I think it has to do with some kind of

8 adjudication of incapacity. And I'm thinking

9 about it, and I think I've got it now.

10 If a person is judged incapacitated and their weapons are removed from them due to that 11 12 adjudication, being incapacitated, there has to 13 be a process whereby someone can restore their 14 rights; restoration of rights piece. And I think that was passed at the federal level. 15 16 Joan and I drafted this up in the mezzanine of 17 the Senate, the floor of the -- we won't talk 18 about that, though. No.

But we've -- this was a piece that I -well, Mr. Bellamy from the Attorney General's office was involved. I'm being a little -- it wasn't quite that bad. It's been -- we've talked with the NRA about this, with members of the Attorney General's office, clerks have been involved. Basically -- and NICS has kind of put

Page 161 out some greater guidance on this in the last

2 year or two. They want you to have a process to restore rights to persons that were previously

4 judged mentally incompetent; to appeal to the

5 Court to restore their rights to possess

6 firearms. And if you don't have that in place

7 then you may be subject to losing additional

8 federal funding or not being able to draw down 9 federal funding to increase your capacity to report data to the NICS system. That's it in a 10 11 nutshell. 12

MS. COBLE: Well, and there was some concern that they were going to broaden some of those to address the domestic violence guns issue was the thread I was going down.

MR. LINHARES: Yes. There was -people want to say well, then let's get rid of -- you know, it's not let -- what do you want to do with felonies now or -- there was some 20 concern that that could be a vehicle through 21 which other things might be driven, yes. And it seems counterintuitive but there already is in place a way to take away those weapons through

24 that judgement of incapacity. So I think this 25 was passed at the behest of some gun rights administrators around the country are having to report differently to NICS, the different 20 federal systems. Aren't there some new requirements of state court administrators? MR. LINHARES: Yes. In terms of the --23 yes. Now, this is regarding the piece of legislation that we tried to pass two years ago.

That has to do -- and I'm trying to -- I'm advocates at the federal level and put in well, we want that restoration of rights in order to get this -- all this information on people that own guns.

Thank you. And it may be the first time this year that I was identified as being one of the cool people. So I'm glad that I'm here on the criminal side.

1300 cases a year, that either are filed as 1

2 domestic violence cases in the criminal side or

3 have a component of domestic violence associated

4 with it. So you would see cases that are filed 5 as a burglary to really grow out of a domestic 6 violence situation.

And we are very blessed in Boone County that we have what is called a DOVE unit, and I understand that Dan Knight may have spoken to 10 vou about the DOVE unit. We are blessed with people who are actively pursuing in a 11 12 not-for-profit capability, trying to address 13 domestic violence. But it was hard to get those 14 people together.

Boone County is a First Class County. We have on any given day perhaps five or six courtrooms going where if you are a victim of domestic violence or a prosecutor or a defense attorney assigned to a domestic violence case that you need to be and you need to resolve that.

What we did in 2008 in Boone County is all of those cases come to one judge. We have worked with the prosecutor's office to get the assistant prosecuting attorney handling the case

Recognizing that we do not have yet an integrated court with regard to the civil side on orders of protection, and the criminal side with regard to someone who is facing criminal penalties for domestic violence. I am here to speak to you about the criminal docket and some of the things that we have done in Boone County without the advantage of legislation or a lot of money to the court system to help address what we perceive to be a very important issue for public safety in Boone County.

I was very pleased to have the opportunity to speak to you all today. I am sorry that my docket in probate took -- it was already set and so there were just too many cases to move, but I'm hoping that someone will share with me the great ideas that have come out of this process. So thank you for having it.

When I became an associate circuit 20 judge one of the things that occurred to me was that we had many resources trying to reach the problem of domestic violence in Boone County. and while our numbers are not great I will tell you the prosecutor's office informs the court system that there are 1300 cases a year, roughly Page 165 to be in the courtroom at the same time. We 2 have worked with the public defender's office to 3 get the attorney assigned the case in the 4 courtroom at the same time which gives us 5 incredible ability to create what is a very busy 6 circuit. Some of the small town aspects that 7 are positive towards addressing public safety 8 concerns.

The victim doesn't come in on a law day in Boone County confronted with trying to see where their case is in 11 different divisions. The victim advocates aren't running between many courtrooms trying to decide what's going on, and more importantly there are limited resources on 15 both the criminal defense side and on the State

16 side. And what I find over and over again 17 sitting on the bench is I will say -- someone 18 will come up and they'll say, Judge, we need to 19 continue this case for negotiation, and I will

20 say how long do you need. And the answer I get 21 back is we've been trying to talk to each other

22 but we can't reach each other. Well, if you can

23 get the attorneys there in the course of a

24 docket where you have about 60 cases set, they

25 have time to talk. They can get cases resolved.

And so without ever wanting to represent to this panel that someone gave me a magic wand when I got the privilege of wearing a black robe, because I didn't get one of those, what I can say to you is efficiency and moving the docket makes a big difference. It makes a big difference for the victim. It makes a big difference for the public safety concerns of what's being addressed.

If cases are not moved I do not believe we do the service that we should be doing to the community in which we live. So while typically the judge is always the umpire and not a player, I am here to say to you that one of the things I would encourage is a concerted effort to move domestic violence cases guicker. We do that in Boone County by having a return date on bonds that is much quicker than a normal return date on a bond.

If you get charged with stealing, get taken into custody, and we have pre-set bonds in Boone County, and you post a surety bond to allow yourself to exit from the Boone County jail, your return date into court on that surety bond is probably going to be three weeks to four

1 return dates are for that single domestic

2 violence -- the formal domestic violence 3 calendar, right?

4 JUDGE DANIELS: Right. Well, or any criminal docket that -- the return date being the first appearance. The defendant's first appearance is before me on one of those criminal dockets that I'm running Monday through Friday.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Okay. JUDGE DANIELS: Once they appear before

10 me on the first time then I set that case on a 11 12 Tuesday or a Wednesday where I have court people 13 in the courtroom to help.

14 ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: I see. 15 JUDGE DANIELS: And I think the -- I 16 think the expedited return date is an important 17 component to being fair and doing the job that I'm charged with doing. If it is a domestic 18

19 violence case that the State is going to be able

20 to go forward with, that needs to happen sooner rather than later. If it is a case that the 21 State is not going to make, that decision needs 22 to be made sooner rather than later because of 23

24 the ramifications to the people who are

25 confronted with bond conditions.

weeks before you ever see the judge. For domestic violence cases that return date is 10 days. It makes a huge difference. So everyone is seeing the judge guicker.

If they do not bond out, they come to my docket, and I have a criminal docket every day except Thursday, and usually I'm in court on something criminal on Thursdays too. They come to my court and I get the process moving.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: So the domestic violence docket can crop up on any of the four law days that you operate?

JUDGE DANIELS: Yes. Mornings or afternoon.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: So there's not a set domestic violence docket that starts Monday morning at 9 a.m.?

JUDGE DANIELS: There is. There is a set domestic violence docket that in addition to 20 that if you are charged with a new domestic violence offense, you're supposed to be coming in to see me as quickly as possible if you're in custody. Within 10 days if you're posting a bond at the sheriff's office. 24

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: So all the

In Boone County we have as part of the process of setting bond that if you are charged -- if you arrested on domestic assault there is identified as the victim in the arrest statements. That gets reinforced when that person comes into court. So I think that's a very positive thing that occurs.

4 a no-contact provision with the person 5

The remedy in the system today --10 understanding that there is a legislative push to do something about it. The remedy today is 11 12 for the State to request that the bond be held 13 insecure under Rule 33.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Can I raise a couple of points that came up during the morning hours that have kind of intertwined with a couple of things you just said? The first is the question as to whether or not, I assume, a misdemeanor penalty, a formal misdemeanor, would

19 20 apply to a violation of the no-contact provision 21

in a domestic violence bond.

JUDGE DANIELS: A new charge?

23 ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: A new charge 24 rather than having the only enforcement tool be judicial contempt, that actually a misdemeanor

apply under the -- and the thinking is that if 1 there's a no-contact provision in the bond and a 2 3 deputy sheriff knows that violation of that 4 no-contact position -- of that no-contact 5 provision is itself a separate crime, that a 6 deputy sheriff will be more likely to go enforce 7 that as a state violation rather than as a 8 potential contempt situation.

that I have set.

JUDGE DANIELS: I would say to you that we are not seeing criminal contempt yet. What I see frequently is that I set a bond on a criminal charge involving domestic violence situations and include in the setting of that bond a no-contact provision. I believe under Rule 33 of the Missouri Rules of Court I have discretion with regard to what bond and what bond conditions I establish with regard to releasing someone from jail. If someone is in violation of what I have set as the bond condition, I do not believe that I need to arraign them. I do not believe I need to establish even an opportunity for them to be heard if I think there is a sufficient risk associated with violation of a condition of bond to cut you off.

MR. LAMB: Oh, no. I'm sorry. I interrupted you. I would agree that you, sua sponte, would have the ability to enforce your own bond. And nothing about a proposal to criminalize a violation of the judge's bonding condition would take that power away, would it?

JUDGE DANIELS: No. And I just -- in whatever legislation, which I would not be qualified to speak to that would come through the different branches of government, I wouldn't want it to get lost in that discussion. The authority that is vested in the Court and the ability of the Court to address immediately safety concerns based upon a bond that, of course, was set.

17 ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: And some of 18 this may differ between the cultures of 19 different circuits. I guess anecdotally you 20 feel that your no-contact provisions in your bonds are being enforced in this circuit? 21 22 Coming out of the 17th I don't know whether law 23 enforcement thinks about enforcing the provision 24 in a bond with the same intensity that they, you 25 know, pick up on state law violations.

Under Rule 33 then what I do if the State makes me aware, I'm not suggesting that I ask -- act as law enforcement. But if the prosecuting attorney's office makes me aware that there has been a violation of a condition of bond that I have set, I set that immediately for hearing. Or if the person is in my courtroom and I believe that there's been a violation, I will hold the original bond insecure and move to enforce that. Which if there is no bond established and a warrant has been issued, that person is taken into custody.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Say that last part again. If there is --

JUDGE DANIELS: If there is no bond that has been filed to allow the person to be released on the warrant then that person can be immediately taken into custody. If the person is charged with the new offense, I would think 20 that would have to be a bondable case.

MR. LAMB: Judge, what would prohibit both from occurring simultaneously, though? You would still have the --

JUDGE DANIELS: There wouldn't be 25 anything that would -- I'm sorry. I didn't mean

Page 173 JUDGE DANIELS: And I, again, could not 1 2 speak to law enforcement in Boone County. I will tell you I take it seriously.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Do you feel like word is getting back to you when there's been a --

JUDGE DANIELS: Yes. And I don't think that always means that the person gets taken into custody directly to the Boone County Jail. I have people that have no criminal history who are in their 40s and they are charged with domestic violence. If I can separate that person from the person that is subject, sometimes that person can go through and resolve the criminal case without it being a further problem. Or sometimes I find situations anecdotally where the people get along fine until a person is either using a controlled substance or alcohol to excess, and that leads

19 20 to a situation. 21 I have tools so if that person comes in to see me on a regular court date and the 22 23 prosecutor says, Judge, we're moving to hold the 24 bond insecure because law enforcement is telling 25

us that there has been contact, I will sometimes

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Second topic. What is your sense -- what is your thought on pros or cons of a 12-hour hold on a domestic violence arrest? And again, I've always been a little dubious about the constitutionality of these. Some of them are informal around the State.

JUDGE DANIELS: I would say that the Attorney General's Office has great resources with regard to the unit that was charged with defending writs of habeas corpus, and perhaps that unit that addresses responses to filings of writs of habeas corpus would be involved there.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Thank you. Well and subtly stated. I'm sure the redness of my face betrays how severely I was just slapped.

JUDGE DANIELS: And I would do that.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: The third question is the pros and cons of a mandatory check-in. Maybe not a mandatory return on a bond but a mandatory check-in after 20 -- after 36 hours, 48 hours, 72 hours after the initial bond is placed on the defendant with the sheriff's office probably to address the issue of the difficulty in serving that individual with a protective order -- obtaining service on JUDGE DANIELS: I can only speak to my -- the way I run my domestic violence court, and I say -- I'm always very hesitant to use a singular pronoun here because anything involving the criminal justice system requires input from many, many people, but I'm typically the person who is setting the return date. I will tell you that if they do not have an attorney at the time they make the first appearance, I'm typically setting counsel status hearings within three to four days. Anybody who wants to find that person can find that person in my courtroom in three to four days. Sometimes I'm setting them within 24 hours.

JUDGE DANIELS: No. No. MS. COBLE: In a non-violent, loving sort of wav.

JUDGE DANIELS: That's not to say that if a judge is truly looking at Rule 33 with regard to potential danger to the identified victim, the community, that you cannot as the Court in your judicial capacity address what would be a problem. And understanding that I'm supposed to be here to discuss criminal responses I would say to you that I routinely get calls in the middle of the night to issue an ex parte order of protection, and when I say 15 County Jail. The person I believe who needs to 16 be calling me is the prosecutor's office to say,

Judge, this is an extenuating circumstance under 17

18 Rule 33 which is the rule of the Missouri

14 where is the person, they say in the Boone

Supreme Court that gives me the authority to set

20 a bond. We believe this typical offense that 21 has been charged as a misdemeanor or a typical 22 offense where someone has been arrested on a misdemeanor needs to carry a much higher bond. ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: And then the 25 third question --

1 Typically in Boone County a court trial 2 after that first appearance and an entry of a plea of not quilty under the Missouri Supreme 4 Court rules is set within five to six weeks. 5 I'm setting them within three weeks. I'm 6 setting preliminary hearings within three weeks. 7 Do I get every single preliminary hearing heard 8 within three weeks? No. And there probably would have been 25 people running against me for 9 10 office if I had really tried to force all of the 11 attorneys to do preliminary hearings within 12 three weeks in my division, but certainly 13 they're checking in. 14

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: So if the bond is issued on a Friday night, the officer will know to write that first arraignment --JUDGE DANIELS: Within 10 days if they're posting bond. If they're in custody, they're coming to me immediately. We differentiate between the in-custody people and 20 the out-of-custody people.

MR. LAMB: Judge, may I ask? Your domestic violence docket, that idea where it spans statewide. Do you think the best vehicle to accomplish that would be through legislation

JUDGE DANIELS: I'm a big believer in following rules, and so whether it's by statute or whether it's by rule, I think that the experience in Boone County could be incorporated in other counties and lead to very positive results in other counties. Because it's not a plan that requires people to administer it so much as rethinking the system to allow the people who are already players in the system to get together and talk to get resolution.

I was visiting with Page Bellamy because he had made an effort to try to get a domestic violence docket court where he was, and I said to him, sometimes I've very envious of the drug court statutes because it recognizes the problem of drug courts, and it statutorily says this is a good way to address this. And so to the extent that you have a statutory recognition of the importance of an efficient and consolidated effort to address domestic violence and you create in the court system, incorporated with the Supreme Court rule, an ability of why this is a very important thing, I think it gives those of us who are out here in 1 change? I mean, as a practical matter.

JUDGE DANIELS: Certainly, the time standards are suggestions from the Missouri
Supreme Court about what the policy should be.

5 And Mr. Linhares is probably in a better

6 position to -- I'm just speaking ideally from a 7 person on the ground floor, so to speak, what

8 would be helpful. But to the extent that the 9 Missouri Supreme Court crafted out an exception

10 for domestic violence cases and said that all domestic violence cases should be resolved in 12 three months -- I'm going to contested preliminary hearings on some cases in six weeks on domestic violence.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: And how -because I have never been a judge I don't know how idealistically I should take that last statement. Is that -- are you putting that forward as something that the Supreme Court forward as something that the Supreme Cou would seriously consider and that that is a

21 practical possibility or is that farther out

22 along the idealistic continuum?23 JUDGE DANIELS: I'm saving

JUDGE DANIELS: I'm saying if the Missouri Supreme Court, understanding that we

25 have a public defender crises, we have a crises

the system trying to work through that some parameters that would be very helpful.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: What do you think is the mechanism for -- in a circuit that doesn't prioritize domestic violence the same way that this circuit does, an arraignment -- a post bond arraignment for someone who has bonded out would normally be something along the lines of 30 days?

JUDGE DANIELS: I think sometimes it's much longer.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: And so what is the mechanism? Do you go to the Supreme Court -- what is the mechanism -- I'm also looking at Greg to see if he is -- what is the mechanism for getting that accomplished?

JUDGE DANIELS: You change the Missouri Supreme Court operating rule on time standards.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: And there is no differentiation between domestic violence and other crimes now?

JUDGE DANIELS: Right now there's not. ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: And what would the culture of the system that you work in tolerate in terms of enforcing that type of perhaps for the prosecuting attorneys with the 2 number of people that they have available. The courts think they have a crises with the number 4 of cases that they're moving. I'm just saying 5 that Boone County is not St. Louis County or 6 Independence or Jackson County, but we move a 7 fair number of cases in Boone County. And I 8 believe that you could ideally set three to four 9 months as a very realistic goal as the 10 suggestion by the Missouri Supreme Court to have 11 cases disposed.

MR. LAMB: Are you talking on the associate level or the circuit level?

JUDGE DANIELS: I'm saying that on the associate level if you took care of that, you would take care of the lion's share of the cases that move to the circuit division.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Greg, how -- if that type of recommendation made it into the report how would OSCA take something like that?

21 MR. LINHARES: OSCA would refer that to 22 the appropriate supreme court committee to study the appropriate supreme court committee to stud that and whether or not that would be 24 recommended up to the Supreme Court. The 25 Supreme Court may want to give that a look to

So it would probably be incumbent on -and Judge Daniels, I think, is on a committee with regards to that so she could make this happen more than me. So again, it's not OSCA's -- we would staff that but it would probably be a recommendation of the Criminal Rules Committee as to whether or not that would be something they would want to recommend at the Supreme Court and take it from there.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: We'll go back on track. We've digressed with all these questions, but continue on.

JUDGE DANIELS: I think that's an important component of -- I think if the entire system works together we get more fair resolution of the charge that all of us have to operate the system to deliver justice both to the victims and to the people who are involved 21 in it. And I think there are many tools that are out there that if you pay attention to, you can get some very -- no magic wand but some exciting things happen to make a big difference. Page 184

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Does the term unified docket mean the civil side plus the criminal side in front of the same judge? What does -- when you use the term unified docket, what do you mean?

6 JUDGE DANIELS: So far from my 7 perspective the only place that unified has 8 meaning right now is there are courts who are 9 doing unified docket, meaning one judge, one set 10 of rules for the civil side. And if it's not one judge there is a concerted judicial approach 11 12 to help those cases get resolved. So you have 13 that on the civil side and you have that on the 14 criminal side. There's some thought that we 15 should try to blend that concept of a unified 16 approach by however many judges you need to 17 handle the volume of cases and combine civil with criminal. I'm not so sure about that 18 19 because the rules are so different, but we could 20 certainly increase communication between what we're doing on the civil side and what we're 21 22 going on the criminal side. 23

My example about them calling from the jail to have me set an emergency ex parte, that's fine. It should be one of the tools in

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Did you have a question, Mary?

REPRESENTATIVE STILL: No.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Do you have other circuits around the State that you would sort of direct our attention to, other circuits aside from this one that you really feel are moving well?

JUDGE DANIELS: All of the circuits are moving well. If we're being recorded I am here to tell you that all Missouri circuits are in great shape.

I think St. Louis County has tried to get a unified docket with regard to what is going on on the civil side with orders of protection, and Judge Burton and I have been in communication about how we can, as part of the educational process in the college, put in something that shares what our experience has 20 been to date.

I think in Buchanan County they're 22 trying to move forward with some sort of docket or court with regard to what the prosecutor's 24 office is doing up there with regards to what is going on.

the toolbox, but some of them were calling me 2 about adjusting the bond -- pre-set bond on a 3 misdemeanor in Boone County is $1,000. Unless 4 the judge moves then to increase that bond with 5 the information provided by the prosecutor, it's 6 going to cost $100 to get out of jail.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: You don't have the civil side docket?

JUDGE DANIELS: No. I have just the criminal side.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: What are the benefits -- or why haven't you gone to that kind of a setup in your court? Why -- are you -- is it a decision that has been made not to bring the two dockets together or is it just something that --what are your thoughts on it?

JUDGE DANIELS: I think change is 17 18 always hard. I think we're still working 19 through the change of trying to get the criminal 20 docket in a unified format. I will tell you 21 that without appropriate communication criminal 22 defense attorneys may not be real enthusiastic 23 about this. Before I ever did this in Boone 24 County I talked to the criminal defense 25 attorneys. I talked to the public defenders. I talked to Ms. Coble. I talked to the 2 prosecuting attorney's office. I talked to 3 probation and parole. I talked to the family 4 counseling center who is the center here in Boone County who is responsible for trying to look at providing batterer's intervention or cognitive behavior therapy.

I had to get approval from the court en banc because I set many, many -- in my division where the probation officer is not recommending that the probation be revoked. I'm simply asking him to come in and visit with me which increases Ms. Blakemore's job considerably, but I think it's an important component from where I read the literature.

I think the social science literature on this is pretty clear that if you select appropriately those people for cognitive behavior therapy and close monitoring your chances of reducing recidivism are the greatest.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: I'm still at 22 a loss. I don't understand the systematic benefits to having the civil decisions made by one judge and the criminal decisions made by another judge particularly in a larger circuit

Page 188 side first. In Boone County we have 11 judges. 1

- 2 We have four associates and one commission.
- 3 Before 2008 what would happen is the domestic
- 4 violence dockets would be spread amongst those
- 5 four judges. When they all started coming to my
- 6 division, unless we were going to keep the 7 courthouse open until eight o'clock at night, 8 there had to be something that gave a little bit

9 in order for me to have all 1300 of those cases.

10 In addition to a criminal docket I do a probate docket, and I do a probate docket for a 11 12 First Class County involving involuntary mental 13 health commitments, decedent's estates, 14 guardianships and conservators, trust 15 litigation, and I get to see people from the 16 Attorney General's Office on sexually violent 17 predator trials.

If I were to pick up -- and I'm not even sure what the numbers are on orders of protection. 4,000, 5,000? How many orders of protection --

MS. REDDIN: It's usually 20 to 30 a docket approximately.

like Jackson where the --

JUDGE DANIELS: It's the numbers. It's the numbers of cases that you would have to have one judge process.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Isn't it the same number of judges? You just split the distribution? I mean, if there are 100 cases -let's say theoretically you've got 100 criminal cases and 100 civil cases and you give that to two judges, each one has still got 100. If you split them 50/50 each judge still has 100. You're still going to need the same number of judges but at least there would be coordination in how the civil matter is being decided and how the criminal matter is being decided. I'm not educated on this topic. I don't understand the system benefits with the exception that a defense attorney might think, oh, it's better if I can, you know, play one off against another 20 and they don't all know what I know.

I don't understand the system benefits of splitting the decisions with regard to a single subject being a defendant on two sides of the civil/criminal divide.

JUDGE DANIELS: Let me answer criminal judge who would be happy to move that off of my 2 docket, where would I find that in my day to add those civil side to the criminal cases? And 4 crime filings I'm not going to touch, but the statistics are what we're reporting on crime or anything else like that in Boone County. I'm just saying we aren't seeing decreases in the number of criminal cases that are filed in Boone County.

10 MR. LAMB: You brought up an 11 interesting point of something that we discussed somewhat in St. Louis; the idea of probation. 12 13 I'd be very interested in your observations on 14 the -- the most effective means that you would 15 suggest for managing -- most effective and 16 efficient means for managing misdemeanor or domestic violence probation orders. Obviously, 17 18 probation and parole has had very limited 19 resources, and misdemeanors do not generally 20 tend to be at the height of where the resources 21 are devoted. How would you suggest the best way 22 to manage those cases are?

23 JUDGE DANIELS: I think like many 24 things you have -- the judge has to be cognizant 25 of the resources that you have available. I for as a judge. My responsibility as a judge, I believe, translates into me following diligently to make sure that the conditions of probation have been complied with and that I am providing sufficient support to probation and parole. And to do those things it means that whether the report comes to me as a probation violation report with a recommendation for a continuance, whether it comes to me as a notice of citation or whether it comes to me as a case history 18 summary, if I do not believe that the person is efficiently utilizing the tools that the system has given that person to be successful on probation, they come in and see me. Again, no magic wand. But I think the show cause hearing does guite a bit to establish that I'm paying get-out-of-jail card free. It is a change in

1 any day I want to. And then I say Defendant is 2 ordered to appear on a warrantable issue, and if 3 they don't come in I'm issuing an order for 4 failure to obey judge's orders, not for 5 probation violation. 6

Now, Boone County is lucky. We also have adult court services through the court system which is judicial probation to a certain extent where we have officers that are employed through the court system that follow the people, and what I have said about probation and parole applies to that also. Not everyone necessarily needs the services to get them to the tools where they need to be, and for those people unsupervised probation works also.

What we try to do in Boone County is in addition to providing an environment where everyone can get together and find the courtroom that they need to be in, which is an important thing, we try to meet three or four times a year between probation and parole, defense attorneys, prosecuting attorneys, the court system, the clerk's office to discuss what our problems are and how we can more effectively manage what's going on.

attention and that it's not just a revoke from the prosecutor's office? JUDGE DANIELS: Well, if I'm going to revoke the person's probation, I believe both under Chapter 559 and under Constitutional Rules of Procedural Due Process that person has to have notice of why I would be revoking their probation. A show cause hearing is just an 15 opportunity for them to come in and visit with 16 me. I can for sure issue that order any time I want to, and the way my orders read is Court reviews, whatever it is from probation and 18 parole, or we have adult court services that 20 does probation periods, and I was going to reach 21 that in a minute, or just this matter of

MR. LAMB: Thank you. JUDGE DANIELS: And going back to the guestion I heard addressed about the weapons. Understanding that there's federal law on dangerous instruments and deadly weapons, I certainly make it a condition of probation which I can do right now, no deadly weapons, no dangerous instruments during the probation period. And then when they're -- when they say to me I am -- I possess many firearms that I inherited from my great-great grandmother who was related to Daniel Boone. What would you have me do with these weapons? I always say probation is a privilege and if at anytime you want to come off of probation, you can come off of probation and we can execute the sentence. feedback that I'm paying attention to how they're doing on probation. And that's all I can ever accomplish because those other decisions are up to them with regard to how -what they want to do, how they want to proceed.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: I don't mean to rush you, but we're about 10 minutes over. Were there -- are there a few other points that you would like to make or --

JUDGE DANIELS: Hopefully -- I really appreciate the opportunity to share with you all. I do think that there are some tools out there that can be utilized and that would be important. And so I never wanted to come in here with the illusion that I might have all of the answers, but I do think we can all within the parameters of where we are, without new legislation, help provide some answers towards solving the domestic violence problem. I appreciate the Attorney General's Office in bringing us all together so we can talk and go forward and do better things.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Well, this whole task force was -- you weren't here at the beginning of the day, but it was Colleen's idea.

1 and you did it by your own willpower and 2 determination and effective communication. I

3 truly appreciate it, and boy were you right. 4 JUDGE DANIELS: Thank you very much.

So I will go back and do a criminal docket. I

6 would love to hear the rest of it, but I need to go back and handle some domestic violence cases 7 8 on the criminal side. Thank you all, and I'll 9 look forward to the report. Thanks again. Good 10 to see you all.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Thank you. Mary Ann Allen is next to the table. She is the executive director of Haven House in Poplar Bluff. She drove about as far as you can drive from here and still stay in Missouri. Welcome. Thank you for making the trip, and we're going to talk for the next several minutes about the challenges of serving rural communities.

Mary Ann, the floor is yours.

BY MS. ALLEN:

Thank you. The last time I was invited to speak at the Attorney General hearing on domestic violence I got to meet Mr. Ashcroft,

25 and then when I heard this was the second one, I

I think she approached both candidates in the general election, and I think both of us equally promised that we would get it done which is an indication of the bipartisan respect that everybody in Jeff City has for Colleen and the importance of the issue. Thank you again for your presentation. As always it was incredibly learned and precise, and thank you for a lifetime of service to the State in many

JUDGE DANIELS: Thank you all. And I had a probate docket and didn't have any request to reinstate the permit to carry concealed. So we haven't had one of those in Boone County yet, although I have one maybe going to be filed.

MS. COBLE: If I could just add a public declaration of my being wrong and you being right.

JUDGE DANIELS: No. I just think --20 you know, what is that old saying?

MS. COBLE: Our first meeting of talking about doing the docket, and I just didn't think it could be done as quickly, as cleanly and clearly as you have shown. What you've done is created a model for the State, wasn't offended why I hadn't been invited back.

I have been the executive director of Haven House for 23 years so I have seen some changes. Sometimes I think a lot of us in the rural areas feel that the more things change, the more things stay the same. So we do have concerns. I was fortunate enough last week to spend a good part of the week with all of my colleagues from around the State, and so I was able to talk with them about, you know, what is it that you want me to tell this panel about what our problems are, and not surprisingly most of us had the very same concerns.

I'm really happy to hear today that all of the folks from the other disciplines were thinking about those problems and ways to address them and have some really good answers. I was really glad to hear that, and that gives me a chance to keep my presentation short.

I also want to make the point that we don't live in Boone County, and we've heard a lot this morning about how things work in Boone County. That is not rural Missouri. It does not even resemble what we are doing in out-state

25 Missouri. So I just wanted to make that point is that we do not have the resources, the manpower, that kind of community to make that work.

We also have other challenges that are practical and get in the way of that, and so we understand that. We do a lot with a little bit, and I'm really proud of the accomplishments of all the rural programs in Missouri.

We opened -- in fact, we're celebrating our 25th anniversary at Haven House. So we're one of the oldest rural programs in Missouri and I'm real proud of that. We started with 19 beds, four residents a day, you know. Then it started picking up steam in the early '90s and so we had to add on beds to get up to 27. But at that same time my board said, you know, this is not the answer to just keep adding beds for families in crisis. We need to be meeting that 18 need sooner, and so we started doing a coordinated community response to domestic violence before that became the buzz word.

What we do is we realized that people should be allowed to stay in their homes. Domestic violence programs everywhere, and really in rural areas, are serving extremely

2 simple court advocacy project, and what we saw 3 that -- the same judge we had then we continue 4 to have, and he's a wonderful judge. At that 5 time he was seeing like 20 percent of folks who 6 were asking for orders of protection were coming 7

So we looked at that and started a

to full orders -- for hearings to get their full 8 orders. That was frustrating to the clerks. Of 9 course, it was. It was frustrating to law

10 enforcement. It was frustrating to him, and it was frustrating to women being victimized. 11 12

So we got an advocate in our courthouse, employed by us, not by the court, not by the prosecutor. By us as the advocate. And she -- we have had someone in place since 1995 there, and almost immediately out of the shoot we saw about 85 percent of women coming back to get full orders who asked for ex partes. So the first year we had about 200 women. Now we're up to about 600 women a year asking for -coming to talk to the civil court advocate about what she can do to stay safe in her own home.

So the advocate works -- and this is only in Butler County because, you know, you need to have somebody there every day. Not on poor women. When I found myself in a situation 2 where I had to make an escape, it didn't matter if I lost my furniture. It didn't matter if I

4 lost my lease because my parents fixed that for 5

me, and then my job allowed me to transfer with the State of Missouri. So all of those things were in place that that move was -- you know, it helped me be able to make that leap into the

9 next part, better part of my life. 10

The women we serve, they come from a very different background. Their families are often dysfunctional, they've been in that cycle of poverty, they've been victims of child abuse of their own, and that's not to say that they're more likely to be battered than anybody else, but they just have fewer resources. And so we're serving those folks. And we said, they especially need to stay in their homes because 19 if they lose their couch or they lose their 20 lease, there's nobody to buy them a new couch 21 and there's nobody to give them a lease next year. And if they have violence occur in their public housing apartment, they never get back in. So it's really important that we give them 24 those tools.

Tuesday one week and Thursday the next because

2 women get battered every day. And so we have

3 now gotten up to 87 percent pretty much every

4 year; between 85 and 89 percent of the women who

5 ask for ex partes come back to their full

6 ordered hearing. They come back because from 7 the day they go in to see the clerk upstairs who 8 sends them downstairs or they come into her office, they are explained about the cycle of 9

10 violence, the effect it has on her children,

11 what her community resources are and what is her

12 responsibility when she has an order of 13 protection because they're not for everybody. 14 You can be in more danger by having one than not 15 having one. And we have to be honest because we 16 believe women are their own best experts.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Do you see a similar increase in the participation of victims in the prosecution process?

MS. ALLEN: Okay. What happened there is that we started getting so busy that -- we started out thinking that she could serve everyone. Then we realized that -- as you

24 listened to the judge just now it's mind

25 boggling how complicated that is, that there was no time and energy for one person so we started 2 a part-time person based in the prosecuting 3 attorney's office hired by us, employed by us as 4 an advocate. This has all been through our 5 coordinating community response. And that has 6 now turned into a full-time position there. 7 We've seen a great increase in the number of 8 cases that are able to be prosecuted. We have 9 -- we had 388 reported incidents of domestic 10 violence in Butler County. 40,000 people live there. That's probably fairly typical. So, you 11 know, we're seeing in those small counties 12 13 around us more like 60 or 75. Those are 14 counties where an advocate could handle all of 15 that, but not where my civil court advocate did six -- I think there was six applications last 16 17 Friday morning before lunch.

You know, so there's a lot of expertise that goes into the criminal court side but the very same results. You have someone -- she's picking up reports at the police station, at the sheriff's department. She's looking through those. She's making phone calls. She's explaining to women that this is -- you know, this is not Movie Of The Week and this is not

Page 204 1 houses over and over. You know, when they see

- 2 that women know they're supposed to call, and
- 3 they're supposed to call every time, and they're
- 4 supposed to ask for a report, a copy of my
- 5 information report I just gave you, sir. And
- 6 they're supposed to have their pictures taken
- 7 and they're supposed to keep these. You know, 8

when they understand that, most of them will do 9 it, and it makes everybody's job easier.

10 Some things that we agreed across is 11 that respondents need to be served ex partes in 12 a timely manner. We are seeing people not get 13 served in jail. Now that -- you know, you can

14 find them. It's the same department. And that's everywhere. I'm not just speaking about 15

16 our county. But that's what I'm hearing is that 17 these are things that need to be done. They 18 have a right to a hearing in 15 days. And women

19 have a right to get those orders of protection

20 and move on with their lives, not continue to have them continued and to stress about that and 21

22 finally just give up and say now I don't even

23 want it. You know, and to get things decided

24 like custody, you know, if there's going to be a

25 divorce. I mean, there are things that really

Law And Order. This is going to take a long 2 time. And this is what you need to do. Do you have people to help you? Do you want me to be your support system? This is what the 5 prosecutor is going to need from you. So she 6 becomes that family that most of us have when 7 we're in a crisis. She becomes that person for 8 the folks who don't have that.

And we see the same thing in civil court and criminal court that we see in the shelter. People using those services tend to not have the resources that many of us do. If your family has resources you're not going to end up -- as likely end up in the criminal court system. You're going to work things out. You're not going to -- it's not going to rise to that. We very often have to become that support system.

We've seen that work really well down 20 there with minimal amount of money, but 21 certainly it's about a community effort. And we're seeing that work in other communities too. That once women understand we would like to -we would hope that that would reduce the angst 24 of police officers who keep going to the same

1 need to happen so that people can move on with 2 their lives.

We have the problem that women can live 15 miles from us and not have a clue how to get there because they don't have a car. I'm not a big proponent of sending advocates into dangerous situations, so if they can get to the Casey's General Store or they can call a cab to get them somewhere, we'll be happy to pay any of those expenses or pick them up. But, you know, there are lots of folks we're serving that they don't have a car. They're not even on the paved road. You know, they're sitting in a trailer court and everybody in every other trailer is his aunt. They're not getting a ride to the shelter. That's how it is.

So we have a whole set of problems of trying to reach people and serve them. We know that police officers are supposed to get victims 20 to a safe place, but we also know when there's one road deputy he or she doesn't really have time to haul somebody from, you know, Neelyville all the way up to Poplar Bluff when there's another call going on. So all those things come into play. We know that's a problem. So that's

Across the board everybody said get law enforcement some training. And I know they get training, but I loved hearing this morning that we would even entertain the idea of ongoing required domestic violence training. There's ongoing POST training but that's also pick and choose to fit those areas, not on topic.

So it would be a wonderful thing if we could refresh that from the top down because there are cultures in every community, there are cultures in every business, there are cultures in every service area and office, and we all know that. And so there needs to be a culture in law enforcement that this is a priority. 388 reports in our county is more than one a day. 18 There probably aren't very many crimes that there are more than one a day of. So we know it is a big deal. So we feel like that is an example right there.

I also appreciated when we talked about getting certification for police departments. I'm on my health department board, and our health department had to be certified to pass

1 is that one judge gave it to his brother to 2 hold. Well, batterers don't just come out of

3 nowhere, and so we know that that may not be the 4 safest place to store a gun when your brother is 5 looking for somebody. So those are things to 6 think about.

> Another interesting thing that came up that you're not going to hear in St. Louis or Kansas City. There's this black powder season for hunting. Do you know what that is? It's a muzzle gun thing. It's not a firearm because it

11 doesn't fire. So we've had situations recently 12

13 guys are driving by their victim's homes with

16 That's about power and control and manipulation.

17 And those are the kinds of things that we really

18 -- if we're going to stop domestic violence we 19 have to remember that people who choose to batter understand power and control. Which leads me to my next topic, and that is 21

22 batterer's intervention.

23 Batterer's intervention needs to have 24 some teeth in it. Does it work? I don't know.

25 It's pretty new. I went to the Duluth Model

all these tests to get to -- so it raises you up

2 a level. I think that's a wonderful idea as part of maybe domestic violence being a

4 component of that, that when, you know, they're 5 looking at funding or whatever, that they have worked towards those goals of excellence in 7 serving victims of domestic violence. So that would be something.

We want to get those guns out of those batterer's hands. Missouri is No. 7 in the number of women killed by their partners. That is nothing to be proud of.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Where is that statistic accessed from?

MS. ALLEN: Department of Justice.

MS. COBLE: Department of Justice released it Thursday.

MS. ALLEN: We tied with Arkansas. So that's not a good thing. And most of those probably were killed by guns. I don't know that.

MS. COBLE: Majority.

23 MS. ALLEN: One thing that -- and we're 24 in a situation now in the rare cases that we hear in our circuit where the guns are removed

Training, and that's the one we use, 26 weeks.

2 What we see is people who can afford attorneys

3 get those dealt down to nothing or anger

4 management which is just kind of silly for 5 someone who uses power and control. They manage

6 their anger very well. But we see men who tend

7 to be in the same situation don't have a lot of 8 resources. They also -- if they end up on

9 probation, we don't see a lot of times that

10 that's a priority through the Department of Corrections for our probationers to do that. We 11

12 don't see especially with private probation that 13 there's a real push for them to complete that.

We feel like if you get sentenced to 14 15 batterer's intervention that should be one of 16 the first things you sign up for. That's 26

weeks you're committed to. Everybody knows you 17

18 would miss a few weeks along the way, but you

19 should not get to wait 3-1/2 years on a 5-year

20 probation to start batterer's intervention when

21 there's someone in danger out there. You can do

22 financial management later. You can do all kinds of things later, but that is critical, and 23

24 it doesn't always happen.

25 Another thing about batterer's intervention is we cannot leave victims out 1 2 there by themselves while their abusive partners 3 are going through batterer's intervention. We 4 need to have -- we have an outreach advocate 5 assigned especially just to those women whose 6 partners or former partners are in batterer's 7 intervention because we know the danger will be 8 heightened when they're in a class telling them 9 that they've made bad choices or -- you know, 10 and they're working through some of their own things.

One thing also when we talked about the circuit clerks that I have -- what we have done there, and I know they've been cross-trained and everybody knows how to do everything, and that's a great theory for all the many things that clerks do. We have one clerk who we paid for 18 and we had to like -- she had to go through 19 volunteer training otherwise she couldn't come to the training for this, but we tricked the 20 Coalition. No. No. We made her go -- she came 21 and she went through volunteer training, became a real volunteer at Haven House and she did volunteer on the side. I'm just joking.

Then she was allowed to go to State of things that are just a little bit beyond what they have to do, but that's certainly a way that we can -- that we can collaborate. And those counties that can't afford to have an advocate.

18 if we could have somebody say, you know, I could

19 step up and do that. Maybe that's not possible.

20 I don't know, you know, to do that in all

> 1 counties don't have an advocate? 2 MS. COBLE: More than half.

MR. LAMB: I don't know the exact

4 number, but there's a significant number, and we 5 could get those.

REPRESENTATIVE STILL: And where are most of the advocates stationed? In the clerk's office? In the prosecutor's office?

9 MS. COBLE: It depends. 10 MR. LAMB: It does depend.

MS. ALLEN: You know courthouses.

They're vying for space. You know, we'll take a broom closet if we can get it. But we have nice 14 offices. We have one -- one of ours is in the prosecutor's office. She's the criminal one, of course. And then the other one is just 17 downstairs and has an office. I mean, we get 18 moved around once in a while, but in return we've done some remodeling and decorating and --I mean, we barter.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Again, I have another uneducated question. If having a clerk assist in the filling out of a form runs the risk of practicing law without a license, and if that's the rationale, why isn't the same conference and to some court advocacy training, rationale applicable to an --

MS. ALLEN: It is. We don't do it either.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Okay. So if you don't do it either what -- why --

6 MS. ALLEN: And here's our dilemma. 7 We're not allowed to write on the paper. You

8 know, you can -- it's about telling them which kind of order to get, right? I mean, those are 9

10 the kind -- you don't want to give that kind of 11 advice. But to say I don't know what that word

12 means. It was pointed out by one of my

13 colleagues today that many of our clients who

14 come in don't know how to read and write. 15 That's the truth. And you might say I think

16 incident is spelled I-N-C-I -- you know, so that the judge can read them when they get them, but 17

24 MS. ALLEN: Right. Right. 25 MS. COBLE: So that you might be saying

24 do. ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: How many

what's helpful here is for a judge to know the first thing that happened or what was the worst thing that happened to you, what was the most recent thing that brought you into the clerk's office today that makes you so afraid right now. So those kinds of things. But if you're -- it's a fine line, and it can be very difficult.

MS. ALLEN: And pre-court advocate days I went to courthouses -- five different courthouses and it was one of these numbers. And you know, they're hard to read and you have this much space, and she said, he said he would kill me and the judge goes so. What he needs to know is that he held a gun to my head last year. He did this to me six months ago. He said, he's going to kill me. I believe it. The judge might believe it too, but he or she has to have that information. And so that's the kind of 18 assistance that's given. Not what you should apply for or not -- you know, and not writing it out. So you have to walk a fine line.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: If I could ask a question of Greg? Greg, what is the -what would the clerks' reaction be to Mary Ann's suggestion that the clerks are trained on this in order to partially sensitize them to it, if they're trained also to stop at a certain level of advice or counseling that they can provide?

MR. LINHARES: There's a clerk sitting

1 the ex partes. They're also doing divorces.

2 They're doing name changes. They're doing --3 you know, that's the problem.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Thank you. MR. LINHARES: It's where the facts end and the law begins. I mean, that's the question really.

REPRESENTATIVE STILL: A guestion for Christy or anyone else. Is it acceptable if there were a trained volunteer to have them stationed at a clerk's -- in a clerk's office?

MS. BLAKEMORE: Of course, yeah. And we've got them -- the prosecutor's office, they're up there and they help out a lot. True North helps in Boone County a lot. If they -if it is one that is very difficult, a detailed one, lots of times we will suggest to them you might want to go, you know, talk to the shelter. We'll be happy to give you the paperwork, but if you're going to need additional assistance, maybe a place to stay, then a lot of times we will suggest that to them. They don't have to, but we'll suggest it.

24 MS. ALLEN: In our situation that's the 25 first thing that they do is say the advocate is downstairs. This is where her door is, by the Coke machine. You know, but because we have that luxury of being in the courthouse.

MS. COBLE: It's real hard to do that with a volunteer; to have any consistency. MS. ALLEN: I would say impossible.

MS. COBLE: It's been tried and not worked.

MS. LAMB: But it can work. I came from Audrain County which is a rural county so I empathize with you. Absolutely. And our circuit clerk had a relationship worked out with the local shelter, which I was on the board of, and that individual was a paid individual, and they were stationed at that office, and that made a world of difference. So those creative solutions are out there.

MS. COBLE: Well, and I might add too, probably the only time that bright line gets drawn, quite frankly, between you're assisting and you are providing legal advice is if there's been some other conflict in the community involving those players. If it's helpful to have those forms filled out very cleanly, you are not likely to be in trouble for unauthorized

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Blakemore? MS. BLAKEMORE: Uh-huh. ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Welcome. MS. BLAKEMORE: Thank you. We would be happy to do that. And I think a lot of ours is we don't have that background, that mindset of an advocate. You know, we've got the mindset of we've got to get this paperwork done as quickly as possible, get it to the judge, and I've got, you know, 20 more sitting over here that have to 21 be processed. That's our mindset. If we had the people to do that, I think across the board clerks would be happy to help out in that area. We just don't. 24 They're not -- clerks aren't just doing practice of law. If there has been any type of public conflict between the judiciary and other members of the community then all of a sudden there's a line. And I encountered that. You know, that all of a sudden then everything had to be checked by legal services which meant that things couldn't get done. And it was just a point of personal conflict.

If you get together in those coordinated community response meetings you can actually avoid that and maybe get some greater clarity on where those lines are.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: The broader point goes again to the Sheriff's Association message from earlier which is there are a lot of enforcement agencies besides law enforcement themselves that need -- that would benefit from training.

MS. ALLEN: I have one thing to add on the gun issue is that my civil court advocate

25 involved in the abuse committed against her. So the panel as well.

2 director of the Kansas City Anti-Violence

3 Project, and we work with lesbian, gay, bisexual

4 and transgender victims of violence and that 5 includes domestic violence.

Thank you to the Attorney General for bringing up the LGBT issue. We're very excited to have Joan Gummels who we've worked with in Kansas City a little bit and to have the LGBT related human rights complaints come out. We were pleased to see that. And thank you for including the LGBT voice in the discussion of domestic violence, and thank you to the rest of

I don't know if you guys received a power and control wheel, or if you've seen them before, but this is something that we use specifically in the LGBT community. There are a few more spokes on that wheel that you won't see on the other wheels that typically use gender as a screening tool and as the binary to talk about domestic violence.

So the Kansas City Anti-Violence

24 Project grew out of a gap in services; a very25 identified gap; a murder/suicide that happened

it's not like occasionally someone has a gun. It's half the time there's a gun involved. And we're No. 7. There's a reason for that.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Any other questions for Mary Ann?

REPRESENTATIVE STILL: I want to say thank you for your outstanding service.

MS. ALLEN: Thank you.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Thank you for your service and for a great presentation. We appreciate it.

Savitsky?

MS. SAVITSKY: Yes.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Beth Savitsky

who is in from Kansas City today who is the executive director of the Kansas City

17 Anti-Violence Project is welcome. She has

18 driven to Columbia today to offer personal

19 perspectives on the domestic violence issue.

Thank you again for making the drive and joining

BY MS. SAVITSKY:

Thank you very much for having me here today. I'm honored to sit at the table in front actually on the Kansas Metro Side of two gay men. So the community started talking if the victim, who was a gay male, was to call the domestic violence hotline, would he receive services, and the answer was no. Typically what would happen is that someone would hear a male voice on the hotline and say I'm sorry, we don't serve men and hang up on him.

So we recognized the use of gender as a screening tool when working with domestic violence victims and formed our own organizations to address the issue of violence in our own LGBT communities. We worked closely with the Missouri Coalition Against Domestic and Sexual Violence. We're also part of the sister organization, The Kansas Coalition, and we also worked a lot with the National Coalition of Anti-Violence Programs that works with organizations that deal with LGBT victims across the State.

We received our 51(c)3 in 2003 so we're a fairly young organization. We've participated in domestic violence reports with the FCADSB, as well as nationally there's an annual report that talks about LGBT victims of domestic violence.

That's released every year, the only report of 2 its kind. So to talk a little bit about the 3 population that I'm referring to, LGBT 4 communities, we talk about LGBT folks being 5 about 10 percent of the community. Sometimes 6 people argue that it's not quite that many. So 7 if we use a rough estimate of 5 percent of the 6 8 million folks in the State, that's about 300,000 9 people in the State of Missouri that identify as 10 LGBT. We're affected by domestic violence in guite the same ways and at guite the same rates. 11 It's 1 in 4. So that's potentially 74,844 12 13 people in the State of Missouri that need help.

Over the last seven years we've grown out of very intense collaborative relationships with other service providers, a growth of our services, a growth of need for our services, and we have a unique mission. We're the only agency in Missouri that works specifically with LGBT victims. We're a non-residential program. We offer direct services to victims as well as outreach and education that partners with other groups and organizations to educate them on the topic.

Our direct services program helps folks in his job if anyone found out, and he had a place to live away from his abuser.

Since we began we've served over 270 victims; victims and survivors of domestic violence. We've also provided almost 170 safe bed nights to victims. Again, we're non-residential. We partner a lot with hotels, with community -- with our hotel partners as well as transitional living programs in the area that we've worked with.

As you can see on the power and control wheel there are a few tactics that LGBT folks experience that non-LGBT folks don't. In terms of using someone's identity against them in the power and control context, those can be very powerful tools. If someone really -- if part of who you are is part of the abuse, it's a very difficult thing to work out. And we also have to navigate other systems very carefully because we don't necessarily have the same opportunities and protections as everyone else.

Our outreach and education program goes out to the community to advertise our services as well as train a whole bunch of people. We've trained over 2700 people in the State of

with crisis intervention, case management, emergency assistance; a lot of the other services that you will see in similar programs.

3 4 as well as having an LGBT resource guide of

5 folks that we've screened to be LGBT or LGBT

6 friendly. So it's not an obstacle for folks who 7 are calling for help to worry, well, if I tell them that I'm gay, is that going to be an issue, or are they going to tell me well, you know, if you partnered with someone of the opposite sex,

We've helped folks like Jake. Jake was one of our clients. He was with his partner for 11 years. His partner continually threatened to out him to his employer. He was a high school teacher. He was very concerned about losing his job, a very real thing that can happen. His partner would oftentimes emotionally berate him while he beat him and tell him that no one would 20 care if he was not in this world because it's 21 one less gay man to deal with.

He found out about KCAVP, and we worked with him to relocate him to a school that had protection. There are certain areas of the State that have protection. And so he was safe

Missouri since we've started. This includes

2 information about issues of homophobia, biphobia, transphobia, the terminology of LGBT

4 issues, how to support LGBT victims if they

5 disclose that they are LGBT, how to talk about

6 intake forms, gender neutral language, those 7 kinds of things. So we recognize that those barriers are system wide and sometimes we have to, again, navigate those systems very carefully.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Can I ask you a question?

MS. SAVITSKY: Sure.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: I think this is the only area of State law in which State law expands to the LGBT community in any regard. Do you find that in the Jackson County area or more broadly than that that the courts are responding to needs, concerns, situations in an open and 19 20 unbiased fashion?

21 MS. SAVITSKY: Sure. Well, yes and no.

22 A lot of the times folks don't want to go to court because they have to out themselves in 23

24 court, and so basically their relationship is out on the table for everyone to see. So a lot 25

of times folks don't want to even get a 2 protection order because it outs them. When 3 they do oftentimes -- there have been mutual 4 orders that have been granted. MS. SAVITSKY: Thank you. There you go. I lost my words. Rather than order an issue they don't recognize; that because it's two men or two women that there is power and control of the situation. Depending on the judge they -- it varies. Most of the time if they -- our advocate and staff is becoming more and more apparent in the community, and they'll recognize that we are just the same kind of victim as anyone else, and they'll take the case seriously.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: And for that group of people who reach out to you for overnight shelter services, are you able to serve -- so far have you been able to serve all of the requests, some of the requests? Do you 25 have to turn away -- are you able to --

1 utilize a lot of the same funding that other 2 programs do and so those are some of the funds

3 that will help us pay for hotels.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Continue.

MR. SAVITSKY: Sure. So as I was talking about the education outreach that we do, we like to weasel our way in sometimes to unfriendly places, but we always try and talk to friendly places, whether it's other service 10 providers, schools, law enforcement, courts. We'll really try and get to other groups and 11 12 say, you know, when you're talking about abuse and relationships are you really making sure that you're not leaving certain communities out

So we talk about victims of domestic violence coming from all different communities. and unfortunately, we're not always included in the discussion. So again, I really appreciate that. We couldn't have done what we do without the help and support from other communities and other folks that recognize that domestic violence is an issue for everyone and it doesn't 23

of the services that you're providing.

So again, thank you for the time today,

Page 227

Page 229 and thank you for your dedication to making 2 Missouri safer for everyone. I appreciate it. 3 ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Thank you. 4 Mary? 5 REPRESENTATIVE STILL: I am going to 6 have to leave, but, Beth, I want to say this is very enlightening, and you have a lot of courage, and I appreciate that. And, General, thank you for your leadership on this issue. Colleen, as always, thank you.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Any other questions for Beth? Thank you very much for vour --

MS. COBLE: Are there specific resources that would help your program in certain ways, do you think? I'm thinking particularly because there are so few other identified focused programs like yours. Is there anything that that -- it places you in a unique position of need for -- you are a statewide resource in that regard.

MS. SAVITSKY: Well, we really do rely on our partner agents across the State. So when we talk to an advocate in Jeff City about someone who is in their area that can't get to

1 MS. SAVITSKY: Occasionally we do have 2 to turn away. Typically because it's short-term and that's -- it's a safety issue, we usually 4 will be able to meet that request. If the issue 5 is longer term we like to talk about safety 6 issues, what's going to happen after two days. 7 If it's not -- if they're going to go back, can 8 we talk about safety issues going back, or if they want to get out of town we've oftentimes 10 worked with another anti-violence program 11 somewhere else to transport the individual to 12 either another shelter or transitional living 13 program somewhere else that there's more support 14 or if they have family and friends get them out 15 of town as well. 16

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: How many hotel chains do you work with?

MS. SAVITSKY: Currently there's three. We're always looking for more partners.

MS. KOSTER: Are they large corporate 21 hotels or are they --

MS. SAVITSKY: It just depends on the manager; the relationship that we have with that hotel manager. Because of the gender neutral language in all of the grants that we get we

Kansas City, it's helpful having those -- having 1 2 that education for those other programs, talking 3 about, well, if you have someone who sounds male 4 on the phone how to not -- how to work with that 5 person successfully. So, you know, training, which you guys do. You know, we come to annual 7 conference. We come to other regions to talk 8 about how to work with LGBT agencies. So we've really found that other agencies are open to hearing the information.

In terms of resources, you know, we're a staff of four. So we are a very small program. It's always nice to dream about a bigger staff and more advocates being able to do more outreach to more locations. So maybe -you know, looking at a regional issue across the State of Missouri.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Thank you 19 very much, Beth.

Our next and final witness today is Katherine Wessling, Welcome, Katherine is managing attorney for Legal Advocates for Abused Women, and is here to offer a civil practitioner's perspective on these issues.

TESTIMONY

1 is for there to be changes so that the judges

- 2 have to address child custody and child support
- 3 issues. Because in many, many of our cases they
- 4 will say okay, we're giving the order of
- 5 protection but all the rest of that stuff, go
- 6 file for divorce, go file for paternity, do
- 7 whatever you need to do. And the whole point of
- 8 the order of protection is to get immediate
- 9 relief so that this relationship can end in a
- 10 safe and viable way. And if the only thing that
- the courts are willing to do is to make the 11
- blanket order don't abuse anymore, we are 12
- 13 ignoring all of these practical problems that
- 14 are the reasons why people return to a
- relationship that is not healthy. It is not 15
- 16 because they like the relationship. It is
- 17 because they need to feed their children,
- because they don't have a place for them to 18
- 19 sleep at night. So ignoring all those parts of
- 20 the statute is a huge problem, and it happens
- many, many times. And I serve seven counties, 21
- 22 and it's almost a universal problem.

Good afternoon.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Thank you, Katherine.

MS. WESSLING: Thank you for having me here. As you said, I work for Legal Advocates for Abused Women which is a non-profit agency in St. Louis, and the only things we do there in terms of legal assistance are orders of protection. So in my time there I've probably done almost 3.000 of those. I've been there since 1996. We serve seven counties, and we do 12 serve the LGBT community as well. So we do try 14 to help where we can.

What I'd like to do today for you is to 16 tell you what I and others in the community. because I took a little bit of a pole when I knew I was coming today, have identified in 19 Chapter 455, the Adult and Child Order of 20 Protection Statute, of places where we could 21 really use some help. So I'm going to go over those, and then I have them for you in written 23 form, but I don't want you reading them. I want 24 you to listen.

Universally the thing that people want

1 ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Does Judge 2 Burton when he handles these orders deal with 3 child support issues? 4

MS. WESSLING: He would, but he primarily is in the juvenile courts. And my orders of protection don't go in front of him. They go in front of the family court judges who are doing divorce and paternity and that kind of thina.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Do some judges deal with the child support and custody issue?

MS. WESSLING: Some will. Some will. But there's resistance from many of them. There's resistance from more of them than there is acceptance by the others. That's unfortunately what we face.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Who makes the request to the judge to even deal with that, because a petitioner may go in front of the judge ex parte and not know to ask these things? 21 22 MS. WESSLING: Well, hopefully they

23 were given help when they filled out the form,

24 the petition for the order of protection,

25 because it's a check box that they can check off. And so hopefully they checked the box off when they filled out the petition for the order of protection. If they didn't, of course, then we have a due process issue and we can't just walk in and say now we want to do this. But hopefully they have checked the box, and many times they have checked the box. That's not our problem. It's just resistance by the Court.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Can you deal with these issues prior to a full order? If vou're in a temporary order situation without the admission of evidence and you have no idea what his salary is and you really only have a -you don't have a good view of what has happened last night or earlier tonight. A judge is not equipped to make such decisions at that juncture or do you disagree?

MS. WESSLING: They're not equipped to make child support decisions, and I don't really quibble with that. Sure I'd like to have it there, but I understand the legal reasons why they're not going to jump in and start doing that. At the ex parte level they can make custody determination, and that, again, on occasion has been a problem where the judges

Page 236 that than almost anything else from what I see.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: With all the experience you have in the legislature how do you think the legislature reacts to such an idea? And maybe if it was confined to the full order.

MS. COBLE: But the moment of danger is for the children as well, and the premise of an emergency order of protection is I am in danger, and I need assistance from the courts. The children do not live on planet child. They are with their mom more typically, and yet they -that unit of the family that can be together safely is not recognized. And there's hesitancy within the General Assembly.

There's been hesitancy from the bench 16 17 that that is -- that is the side door divorce, and -- which I think is an incorrect framing of 18 19 the issue because it's 15 days of safety. 20 Surely we can grant 15 days of safety. If the iudge has sufficient information to believe 21 there is a risk of danger to sign the order to 22 begin with, that's sufficient for 15 days these 23 24 children are in the custody of this person who 25 says that they're at risk and need to be choose to -- there are four things they could issue with the ex parte level. They can order not to abuse, that whole thing. They can order to make the abuser leave the home. They can have the abuser not communicate with the victim, and they can give custody of the children to the person who filed.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Is that in the statute now?

MS. WESSLING: Yes. That's in the statute now. And it's very judge specific as to whether they will actually go ahead and make that custody order. That custody order can cause someone problems if they don't make it 15 because we have a child snatching issue going on and people are afraid to send their children to school. So it really -- it shouldn't necessarily be laying a premise for what will happen farther down, because I agree the judges

- 18
- 20 haven't heard the evidence yet. But at least to
- 21 tell people what the ground rules are instead of
- 22 this 15-day waiting period where everyone is just in a free for all. So it's a real problem. 23
- 24 And many more people will dismiss their
- petitions and give up on the court system over protected.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Joan, I'd be interested in knowing Judge Daniels' view on the custody and child support issue. It's really -it's a powerful idea but a lot of aspects to consider.

MS. COBLE: The custody provision has been there since 1980.

MS. WESSLING: Yeah. It's just whether they use it or not. And what you'll kind of see -- that's my first point because it's so prevalent, is almost everything I'm going to say has that same common thread running through it, that we are looking at she's prob -- is she making this all up to get an advantage in the divorce. That's unfortunately a very prevalent fear in the courts, and unfortunately a lot of times I'm battling against that presumption rather than a feeling of we want to help a person who's really in danger.

So we have that as Point 1. Point 2 is there's a provision in the statute, 455.050, that says if -- that the courts of full order can only issue a custody order if there's no prior order already out there existing or pending regarding custody.

Now, this pending word is a problem because what will happen is my client will file an order of protection. We will go for the hearing two weeks later, and the day of the court hearing the respondent will walk in with his attorney and say I filed for divorce five minutes ago, and the judge will say okay. That wipes everything out. We'll deal with whether we're going to order him away from you or not but we're not going to deal with custody. support, anything like that.

She may not have been served. There's no hearing set that's going to deal with any of these issues, but for many judges because that word pending is in there they will interpret it that way. As soon as something is filed they consider it pending, and without service they don't even have jurisdiction over it yet, but they will still consider it pending. And so that's a real common way for abusers and their lawvers to make the order of protection process very meaningless for the person who needs the protection.

It would really help if we could have each other anyway. Well, the problem is after 1

- 2 years of being told no one is going to believe
- 3 you, no one believed you. So it really gives
- 4 the courts an out to not fact find. We need the
- 5 courts to do their fact finding to figure out
- 6 who they think is the person asserting the power
- 7 and who isn't. And when mutual orders of
- 8 protection are allowed, it just doesn't happen.
- 9 So I would really like to see the law be strong 10 enough to say there are no mutual orders of protection. 11

If two people are violent -- and violence and abuse are two different things. If two people are violent maybe neither one needs the order of protection. Speaking from my own perspective on that. But if someone is actually being abused, we need the courts to make a decision on who it is and then to move forward to protect that person. So I would suggest that you look at that because that's a real problem for victims as well.

Another bootstrapping thing that comes in is paternity. A lot of people who file orders of protection are not married to each other or they haven't gone through already a some adjustment to that word in the statute. I understand if there's an existing order that's already in existence and there are other ways to modify that, but when there's no order already out there and it's just maybe some day we'll get one, it's a problem. And so that -- that goes along with that first one.

There is a provision we fixed not long ago -- well, probably a little while ago now about mutual orders of protection. The statute right now says there's no mutual order of protection that can be entered unless both parties have filed a petition asking for an order of protection against the other. You can't walk in with one person having filed and suddenly say you both have an order of protection against the other. Well, the problem is the same thing.

The abuser or the other side will walk 20 in the day of hearing or maybe right after they got served, file for an order of protection, and the easiest thing for the Court to do is to say why don't we just say stay away from each other. We'll give you both an order, and what's the 24 problem with that if you don't want to be around

- legal lawsuit to figure out if dad is the dad of 2 the child. So what happens is, you know, 10
- 3 vears into this child's life no orders of child
- 4 support have gone on the whole time. There's
- 5 been nothing in concrete saying he's the dad.
- 6 Mom files a child's order of protection and
- 7 suddenly it's I want every other weekend with

- establishing that they're the legal father in 9
- 10 the first place. You know, it's like have the

I think it would really help if the 13 14 statute would clarify that without a legal

- establishment of paternity there shouldn't be 15
- 16 visitation discussion. There also shouldn't be
- child support ordered because maybe he's not 17
- 18 really the dad. I mean, I'm not saying I want
- 19 it all either, but it needs to be established
- 20 before the order of protection process, not in
- 21 the middle of it just because everybody knows
- 22 he's dad and now we're going to pretend like the
- paternity laws aren't relevant anymore. It 23
- 24 happens a lot that way.
 - I'll admit that with my clients sometimes that will put them at a little disadvantage because they want that child 3 support, but there are more of my clients who 4 are worried about the safety of their children then there are clients who are doing it for child support.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Do you worry that that determination could delay the process for weeks and maybe a couple months? What's it, a DNA determination?

MS. WESSLING: Well, I don't think that's an order of protection issue. The order of protection process should go on. It's separate.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Paternity. MS. WESSLING: Paternity can go be its own thing. Someone can file for paternity. If they want visitation rights, do it the way the law has set up for it. Don't mix it in with the order of protection. I think they're two separate things, and they should be kept separate.

Okay. This one is a little bit -- this is one that came from some advocates who work with the police department. In the order of protection process we have mostly standing categories that require some sort of intimate partner relationship between the parties, but then we have this catchall about stalking, and what happens is that people go and file petitions of orders of protection alleging separate type of proceeding so that these family court cases don't get bogged down with the

Page 244

- 1 stalking cases, because our judges are getting 2 really, really cynical when they sit through an
- 3 hour of a whole bunch of neighbors fighting over
- 4 something, and then I walk up with my client who
- 5 is in real danger. They're so burned out after
- 6 that last hour they don't even want to hear it
- 7 anymore. So I think we're -- without letting
- 8 down the stalking victims because it's a very
- 9 serious matter, I think we need to look at
- 10 whether these need to be two separate 11 situations.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: That's a very interesting point.

MS. WESSLING: I think it would help the judges out too. The dockets would change dramatically if we did that. Going back to the visitation issue. If paternity has not been established then what we have is the problem where the Court says well, if we don't know that that's dad, we can't issue an order giving mom custody because we don't know that there isn't another dad out there. He's not a party to this case, and we can't make an order that adversely affects his rights which I can understand.

Instead could the statute or the judges

look at wording such as okay, we're not giving 2 someone custody but we're saying this person

3 doesn't have custody. This is a dangerous

4 person who has been abusive to the adults in the 5 situation. We're not saying she has custody but

6 we're saying he does not. I think that's one

7 way to get around it. It doesn't infringe on 8 anybody else's rights, but the way our forms are

9 set up right now doesn't really include that

10 option, and I think that would make the judges a little more comfortable if we gave them 11 something like that.

13 I would really like to see more 14 emphasis on understanding impact on children of 15 domestic violence because pretty much what we 16 see is okay so it's between mom and dad but he has a right to see the kids. I realize I'm 17 18 using the she/he language, and I don't mean to 19 offend. Obviously, it works the other way in 20 those cases, but this is what I tend to work 21 with so I fall into those pronouns.

I would really like to see that when child orders of protection are involved -because they order a guardian ad litem in those, the attorney for the children. The ABA section of family law has standards for attorneys 1 2 representing children in family law cases, and 3 the most basic one is that they meet with the 4 child before they come to court. I can't tell 5 you how many times that does not happen, and the 6 immediate approach is let's just work out joint 7 custody. That immediately puts the victim of 8 domestic violence in the category of the problem 9 parent because they have reasons why they think 10 that's not appropriate. And so I would really like to see imbedded somehow into the child 11 12 order of protection statute requirements that 13 the court voir dire a guardian ad litem prior to 14 them participating as an attorney to make sure 15 they fit these family law standards.

I wish I didn't have to say that because there are a lot of good guardian ad litems out there, and they're doing exactly what they should do, but there are also cases where it's seen as I'm not going to get any money out of this, and I'm not educated in domestic violence, and quite frankly the courts want them to mediate. They don't want them to represent the best interest of the child. They want the guardian ad litem to be a mediator, and that's

1 Well, if you haven't heard anything, of course, 2 they aren't taking the abuse seriously because 3 they don't want to talk about that part. They 4 want to figure out how can we exchange the kids

5 so that the parties don't see each other and 6 what's the appropriate amount of child support. 7

Honestly, I believe that the judges feel that they are doing a good thing in that because they're thinking well, she's getting the order of protection so why would there be a problem. So I think their hearts are in the right place because I do -- that is where they're coming from, but they're not getting to the nuance of what's going on here. They're not addressing how that power and control is infiltrating all these parts of their lives, and how it's affecting the kids.

I went and spoke at Sanford Brown College the other day and -- about domestic violence, and a young woman raised her hand who's about 20 now and said this happened with my parents. She said they sent me off with my father every other weekend, and it was just awful. He spent the whole time asking me about my mom and talking about how horrible she was.

And no, he wasn't hitting her but that was a

I really hope that some of the children who have been in these situations as they grow up are able to start to come forward in testimony to you as well and to others about what their experience was like with the laws that we've been existing under because their perspective has really not been heard very well. And I think that -- I was really glad she was brave enough to raise her hand and say that. I really was. And the final thing that I would like to see in my little list of Top 10 is that recent case law did clarify that guardian ad litem fees are court costs and that a petitioner who files because they do not pay court costs for an order of protection should not have to pay that. Well, because it's in case law not all the judges are aware of that, and especially if the person doesn't have a lawyer they often will get hit with half the GAL fees or something like that. So I think it would be nice if the statute would certify that for our judges because we've already got it in case law.

I would like to see some language emphasizing what their role really is because it's not happening on its own that way. And along with that I would like to see in 455.050, again, that if there's a finding that domestic violence has occurred. Right now what's happening in practice is that the person who has alleged the domestic violence and has filed for 10 the order of protection is the one who also bears the burden of proving domestic violence is affecting the children adversely. And I would like to see that flipped. And if the judge has already determined that domestic violence is happening, that burden ought to shift over to the person who's doing the abuse to say this is why visitation won't hurt the children.

I say after a finding has been made because I think that that should be the basis 20 for almost everything we're doing here. It 21 seems to come in at the very end. You know, in 22 these order of protection cases we go in and the first thing everyone wants to do is sit down and 23 talk about all right what can we work out so 24 25 that we don't have to have a hearing on this.

I won't claim that anyone automatically subscribes to this. So if some legal services attorney says I didn't say to voir dire GAL's then they probably didn't. I have this for you with the statutory sites for each thing that I mentioned. I also have the statutory summary chart of domestic violence civil protective orders nationwide that's produced by the American Bar Association Commission Against Domestic Violence. I agree with you in your anecdotes. As a former prosecutor and in private practice with a lot of family law, you are exactly right that it forces a terrible choice for a petitioner who can't afford an attorney to go in pro se and go through this process and to fear sending their child to school because the abuser may lawfully come and take the child and then force them back into the home as a way of manipulation as we've heard so often today repeatedly. So thank you for your insight. ATTORNEY GENERAL KOSTER: Well, we've completed about 10 hours of testimony, and the testimony, again, just continues to be very pointed and intelligent and helpful.
